WEAVER WOULD ARBITRATE

Tangle in Congressional Nomination Remains--Ferris Insists All Was Fair

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 28.—Claude Weaver of Pauls Valley, contesting the democratic congressional nomination in the Fifth district, is here tonight consulting with attorneys looking to an adjustment of the controversy by the state election board or through a primary. Mr. Weaver claims to have held 113 out of 228 votes without dispute, against 115 that are claimed by Scott Ferris of Lawton. In addition to these there were 28 votes from Cleveland, Pottawatomie and McClain counties which he insists were regularly for him, but were contested, and the contest has not been determined. With these votes he shows he is the nominee.

Tonight Mr. Weaver telegraphed Mr. Ferris offering to arbitrate the matter through a primary.

"If I can not establish my right to the nomination," said Mr. Weaver tonight, "I will not allow my name to go before the people in this race. Decision by the proper authority will be final with me."

Mr. Weaver is a native of Gainesville. He graduated from the Texas University, law department, in 1887, being a classmate of congressman Henry of Texas and R. E. L. Knight of Dallas. Mr. Ferris is from Missouri.

Lawton, Okla., June 28.—Hon. Scott Ferris of this city, who was nominated for congress by the assembled delegation of the Fifth congressional district at Hobart yesterday, in response to the reports that have gone broadcast relative to the alleged practice of fraud in the nomination, tonight made the following statement from his headquarters:

"My nomination was in all things regular. I am thankful to my friends for their loyal support, and I promise to make a race that the Fifth congressional district democrats will be proud of. Following is the 296th ballot, on which I was nominated: Comanche 20 votes, Tillman 7, Jackson 13, Kiowa 15, McLain 10, Cleveland 15, Pottawatomie 16, Grady 19; making a total of 115 votes, the number required to nominate."

Judge W. H. Hussey, chairman of the convention, said tonight:

"The result of the 296th ballot was announced by the secretary and the chairman. I declared the number of votes cast a majority and Scott Ferris the nominee of the convention. A motion to adjourn was regularly made and seconded. It was announced by the chair it was carried, and I declared the convention adjourned sine die."

SUPPLICATE CONGRESS AGAIN

Possibility That Congress and Not the President Will Pass on the Constitution

Guthrie, Okla., June 28.—If the legal point raised by Attorney General Bonaparte, in considering the Oklahoma constitution, involving the authority of congress to delegate the execution of its constitutional power to the president is sustained, the new state may, after all, have to become a suppliant at the doors of congress in order to secure a seat in the federal union. Under the circumstances congress would become the sole judge of Oklahoma's qualifications, and accept it or not as it chose.

The question arising from the grant of exclusive power in the federal constitution, saying congress may admit new states, necessarily carrying with it the duty, in this case, of determining whether the enabling act has been complied with, and that the constitution is republican in form. It is doubtful, so expressed in the law office in Washington, whether this function, construed to be legislative, can, with legal effect, be exercised by the executive branch of the government, and while Mr. Bonaparte, who voluntarily brought the subject up with the convention's delegation in Washington, several weeks ago, had not then reached a conclusion, there was strong belief that congress in this particular had erred.

Five states have been brought into the Union by proclamation of the president under enabling acts, after all of which the Oklahoma act was mainly fashioned, and in those instances the executive, from words of proclamations, was the sole judge as to whether the constitution met the requirements.

Democrats interested in the Oklahoma situation are waiting to see how closely the law office will follow the precedent to making its recommendations to the president.

The president, whose duty is believed to be only ministerial, is quoted as favoring Oklahoma's admission, notwithstanding the broad statement frequently made that he would "turn the constitution down." By ordering a census of the two territories for the purpose of fixing the population, it is demonstrated that Washington proposes to accept no one's word as to conditions here, but will secure evidence from agents specially detailed in the field.

There is, however, a political condition presented which might make it desirable not to have Oklahoma in the Union until after the next presidential election, and the unfortunate constitution tangle may furnish the national leaders, who, it appears, can not control the president in the matter, the avenue for shifting the responsibility to congress, where it can be accepted with more or less impunity.

Let Off With $5.00 Fine.

Mary, the negro woman who shot Tom Thomas Friday, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Winn today and after investigating the trouble he concluded she was guilty of no more than an assault. So she was let off with a $5.00 fine.

It seems she is not really Tom's wife, though they have lived together for a long time. At least she says they are not married, and her name is Mary Gibbs.

Flung a Brick at Flying Jenny.

John Hughes, the Western Union messenger boy, occupied the boards in the mayor's court this morning. He was charged with disturbing the peace in that last night, because the merry-go-round man at the carnival would not permit him to ride on a pass which they claimed was no good, later he threw a brick at the man, but it missed him and grazed a lady's shoulder.

The jury found him guilty, but the case was appealed.

The Old Roman.

Could anyone come away from the democratic state convention without feeling the greatest admiration for that noble old democratic Roman, Judge Furman? There he stood with the second highest vote of any of the seven candidates, and yet, due to the rule of the state committee, one senator must come from each territory, hence Judge Furman failed to realize the honorable ambition of his life. Yet his democracy was above his personal ambition, and not a regret or protest was uttered by him. Indeed, his only wish seemed to be for the success of democracy.—New State Tribune.

SHOT BY HIS DARLING WIFE

Negro and Spouse Quarrel--Repelling an Attack With Chair She Shoots Him in the Mouth

Tom Thomas, a young negro residing in the Black Bottoms, had a difficulty with his wife, Mary, Friday afternoon at 5:30. Result: Tom lies with a dangerous bullet wound in the neck and Mary languishes in the federal jail charged with the shooting.

As the story runs Tom and his wife quarreled Friday morning and she went away to the house of a neighbor, Dora Rhodes. In the afternoon he went to Dora's and remonstrated with his wife, emphasizing the argument with a chair and other household articles. In repelling his savage attack

Mary says she grabbed her revolver, a small 32-caliber affair, and fired.

The bullet struck Tom in the mouth, lodging in the back of his neck. His wife went immediately to the United States marshal's office and surrendered. Surgical attendance was secured at once for the wounded negro and his recovery is thought quite possible. Of course the wife will be held in custody awaiting the effect of the wound.

Tom was in the employ of the cotton firm of Frierson Bros., and he and his wife have heretofore been considered quite orderly negroes.

OKLAHOMA'S STRUGGLE FOR STATEHOOD.

Under the caption above the Dallas News summarizes our statehood status in the following editorial, which seems to fear our democracy has taken a little too much advantage:

There seems to be every likelihood now that the people of Oklahoma will have an early opportunity to pass judgment on the work of those whom they commissioned to make a constitution. The News' understanding of the matter is that the constitution may now be submitted to a vote, notwithstanding any appeal that may be taken from the Oklahoma supreme court's decision that it has no authority to review the acts of the convention, a body which has almost the plenary power of the people themselves. The decision amounts to a declaration that it is not for the court to determine, in such a proceeding as was brought against the convention officers, whether any of the provisions of the constitution that are objected to are subject to or are not compatible with the federal constitution. Chairman Murray has very promptly taken steps to have the constitution submitted to the people, and even should the supreme court hold to a view contrary to that which has been taken by the Oklahoma tribunal, its decision will come too late to prevent action by the people.

The decision as to whether the proposed constitution is a substantial compliance with the enabling act, will, in all probability, therefore, be made by the president. After the constitution shall have been adopted, any specific thing done by virtue of the power it confers may be challenged in the courts, and in that way the question as to whether any of the provisions of the instrument are in conflict with the federal constitution will be answered by the highest tribunal in the land.

It seems to be assumed, and doubtless correctly, that the part of it picked out as most vulnerable to attack is that which prescribes the political subdivisions. The News has no doubt that the hand that marked off the senatorial, representative and congressional districts was guided by a full consideration of party advantage. The thing has been done before, indeed, so frequently that we should have been astonished if the democrats of Oklahoma had foreborne to emulate the bad example. The president has ordered that a census be made of every proposed subdivision, and Mr. Murray has appointed a committee to consider whatever objections the republicans may have to the plan of districting agreed on. We ought to get considerable enlightenment from those proceedings.

If the gerrymander amounts to a disfranchisement of voters, the democrats would do well to correct it at once. A gerrymander, although a discrimination against the opposing party, is not necessarily tantamount to a disfranchisement of voters; but if the apportionment provided for in the constitution amounts to that, it would be unmitigated folly for the democrats to persist in it. Such an injustice as that would be a valid reason for denying admission to Oklahoma, and it must be obvious to the democrats there that the president will be content with less than a valid reason. Prudence will prompt them to yield something of the advantage enjoyed by their political opponents in having their partisan in the White house.

DO IT NOW.

Cut your weeds.

Have you cut those weeds? If you haven't, DO IT NOW.

Cheer up. Ada may be floating on a sea of oil for all you know.

What's the matter with that pottery? Let's get somebody interested.

Hold your breath—the drill is nearing the gas pocket or oil pool—either one. We will tell you which later on.

The Katy railroad enjoys the police protection of the city. Then why should she not obey its ordinances? They should be given a trial, at least.

Politics is uncertain, but it is reasonably sure that Oklahoma will be a democratic state, with seven votes in the college, if admitted in time to vote in the election next year. Those seven votes may decide the thing, as did the three votes of Colorado thirty-two years earlier. History sometimes repeats itself. The g. o. p. is human, and it is only natural for it to file a protest against adding seven votes to the democratic column in the college in 1908. But there is another consideration. The thing would be transparent, and it would be arbitrary. Deep seated in the American character is a love of fair play, and an injury visited on Oklahoma might be resented in some other communities where the republican fences are not so secure as they were. And it is possible that is what will fetch Oklahoma into the election of 1908.—Washington Post.

RED RIVER NAVIGATION.

Morris Sheppard Visits Paris in Connection With the Project.

Paris, Texas, June 28.—Congressman Morris Sheppard is in the city, gathering data in regard to the tonnage on Red River, to be embodied in the report of the engineer of this district for the fiscal year ending June 30. He called on Secretary Ragland of the Board of Trade, Captain S. J. Wright and others, and will go tomorrow to Fort Towson, I. T., to interview George I. Harvey, who is operating a steamboat on the river in the lumber business. He says he has already visited the lower section of the river and finds great interest taken in the subject of navigation. One lumber company is constructing six large barges at Fulton, Ark., and has had a 60-horsepower steamboat built at Cairo, Ill., to pull them. The Ames Shovel and Tool company, which has a plant here, has purchased a small boat at Lyons, Iowa, to raft logs down to Archer City to ship over the Frisco to Paris. It will be introduced as an experiment and will not attempt to haul logs up stream, but will be used to push and guide the rafts. With these two boats and the government snagboat quarter boats operating on Upper Red river, within the next two or three months, Congressman Sheppard says the era of actual navigation will have really begun.

Douglas' Prospects Rising.

Judge W. C. Raymond, the recognized head of the republican party in this territory, is carefully preparing his slate for republican party nominations, and is likely to select Clarence B. Douglas, one of the attaches of the Muskogee Phoenix as one of the two candidates for members of the legislature. While Judge Raymond concedes that Mr. Douglas is without experience qualifying him for such important duties as will devolve upon the first state legislature, yet he insists that as he will select a man of experience for the other member, and has confidence that there is good material in Mr. Douglas for development of legislative ability. Of course, the Tribune believes that the democratic nominees will be elected to represent Muskogee county in the legislature, and yet we are glad to see care taken by both parties to nominate good men but the importance of the first legislature suggests the impropriety of going too far with experiments.—New State Tribune.

NEW STATE NOTES.

(From The Oklahoman.)

Real estate dealers at Ardmore have perfected an organization.

Wheat is reported as making an excellent yield in Custer county.

Johnnie Smith, a little boy, was instantly killed by being struck by lightning near Loco.

The republican party in Oklahoma appears to have lost track of its bell weather.

After all the people of Indian Territory have no great dread of the sting of the Asp.

The man who does not lend a helping hand in promoting the welfare of his town and county should make room for another, says Alverson of the Loco Ledger.

It is somewhat novel to have the "blocks of five" graduates of Indiana offer advice to the people of the new state relative to political morals.

As a result of the wheat shortage and the rising price of flour, the Oklahoma consumer must convince himself that the half loaf is better than the whole.

The town of Thomas is now on the dry list, but there are several applications for liquor license before the county commissioners.

The towns of Oklahoma can have no better advertisement than shady and clean streets, nice parks and handsomely painted houses.

The Madill News makes this comment relative to the vanishing joys of life: "Constable Grider captured and smashed 76 bottles of booze at the depot Friday evening."

A deposit of white marble susceptible of a high polish has been discovered near Thomas, Okla. The extent of the deposit has not been ascertained, but a quarry is to be opened at once.

It remained for an Oklahoma man to discover that the 2-cent fare in Missouri counts for little, as the railroads there only carry 100 pounds of baggage free, when the former limit was 150 pounds.

Judge Raymond, in discussing President Roosevelt's motives in calling for a census enumeration in the new state, is merely speaking the sentiment of the ebony-hued section of the republican party, of which he is the major domo.

The republican party in Oklahoma was so busily engaged in hammering the constitution that it exhausted its strength and paralyzed its nerve centers. It is apparently unable to present a respectable front in the state campaign now at hand.

The newspapers at Lawton have published a joint announcement that they have tired of boosting the town when the business men there carry all their printing to the job printing houses. The appeal is strong and sensible and should be fruitful of results.

The parents of Fred Ratcliff, a Vinita boy, have just received a letter from him dated at Dawson, Yukon, telling of the 400-mile trip down the Yukon river from White Horse, in an open boat. He says in that part of the world the sun rises at 3:30 in the afternoon and sets at 9:30 at night.

"Oklahoma owes everything to the republican party," says the Clio Chieftain. The statement is rather broad in its scope. It does, in fact, owe much to the republican party: Years of misrule, exile from statehood for years, a reign of graft under territorial rule that is almost without parallel. Yes, Oklahoma owes much to the republican party and the debt will be paid when statehood is secured.

Doesn't Expect Removal of Division.

Tom Burns, roundhouse foreman for the Frisco at Francis, spent the night here. Like the other employees of the Frisco at Francis, he would like to see Ada made the division point, but he thinks the change highly improbable, since the difference in mileage coming to trainmen would cost the company about a dollar extra for each train.

He says the payroll at Francis now amounts to about $8,000 a month.

About Ada Folk.

Sulphur, I. T., June 27.—Col. F. O. Harris, Maj. G. O. Hunter, Gen. John Rinard, Attorney Thomas Holt and one hundred and ninety-six other Ada citizens came to Sulphur, Ada's Carlsbad, yesterday to hear Billie Bryan, the great commoner, and to mix for a few hours in the gaities of this resort. Ada people have always looked upon Sulphur and Plat park as their outing place, their resort, their Carlsbad. This is the light in which all other towns should regard this city of many springs and cool, Arbutle breezes.

RETURNS FROM JAPAN.

Hear Miss Roach Tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church.

It will be remembered that about two years ago Miss Ruth Roach, sister to our esteemed fellow-townsmen, H. B. Roach, left Ada for Japan, where she was engaged in mission work until recently, when she was compelled to return on account of ill health. She is in Ada and will address the Christian Endeavor at the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Everyone is cordially invited to hear this Christian woman of wide experience. Since the women of the town will not attend the men's service, they should furnish a liberal attendance.

Big Night for Negroes.

It was a gala evening for the Dark-town population. A big ball was pulled off in the building formerly known as the Saddle Rock Restaurant. The negro band belonging to the street fair folks furnished entrancing music and the light fantastic was tripped 'till the wee small hours. There was the minimum of disorder. Trouble at one time began to brew, but it was quickly suppressed by a patrolman's speedy appearance. Also a prize fight had been quietly planned for the evening, the participants to be a local negro sport and a member of the carnival company. But this part of the program fell through quickly when it was discovered the local officers could not be "fixed."

It goes to the roots of disease, invigorates, strengthens, exhilarates. Its life producing properties are not contained in any other known remedy. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Sold at Ramsey's Drug Store.

MIKE CASSIDY STILL PREACHING.

He Preached to a Large Audience on Friday Evening—Announcements.

The evangelist's subject last evening was "The Spiritual Birth." He handled it well. He held out that the only true salvation came about by a regeneration of the soul; that the conversion of a sinner was as much a miracle as was the raising of Lazarus from the dead. He denied that ceremonial salvation would do, insisting that the life must be made anew. He attacked the theory of evolution, and upheld the idea of a close relationship of God and man.

There was no service this forenoon. The regular service will be conducted this evening. All are urged to attend.

Rev. Cassidy will preach Sunday at 11 a. m., again in the afternoon to men and boys, and in the evening. On account of other meetings conflicting with the men's services two weeks ago there were not very many out, and for that reason it is hoped that a good crowd will be on hand at the services for men and boys tomorrow. Tell your neighbor and come, for Mike Cassidy is known for his great love for men, and he wants to have a talk with those of Ada, his neighbors.

STILL FEEL LIGHTNING.

Two Ada Men Had a Narrow Escape From a Thunderbolt.

M. P. Donaghey and M. P. Eaton are still tingling a little as the result of a shock from lightning last Wednesday night. They were returning home late, after hearing Bryan at Sulphur, when they took refuge from a thunder storm in the revival tent near the Baptist church. Suddenly both were knocked down and upon regaining consciousness felt like pins were sticking all over their bodies. It was found that a thunderbolt had struck the church tearing off a lot of shingles, and following the electric wire, broke all the globes in the tent. Naturally the men still feel a bit nervous.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure by local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proved catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

GOOD FOR EVIL.

How Micky Won the Game for the Boyceville Nine.

"Fellows, we've just got to win the game to-morrow. Those Jonesville chaps have been strutting around in a way that's unbearable ever since they beat us last year. We've got to take the pride out of them, and that in a hurry."

Captain Jack Dunsmore's delivery of this speech made a profound impression on his hearers, among whom were the entire Boyceville nine and three or four of their loyal supporters.

"Well, Jim Warner's arm is entirely well again, and, if he takes care of himself until to-morrow, I don't see how we can help winning," said Catcher Bob, and the rest of the group murmured assent.

"Bet I'll reach the swimmin' hole first!" yelled Bill Wolf, sprinting down the dusty road at a mad pace as the clump of trees that marked their favorite bathing place came into view. Every boy there accepted the challenge and away they dashed, raising such a cloud of dust as would have done credit to a herd of cattle.

Bill Wolf dived down the long slope that led to the edge of the creek, but before he had gone half way he reappeared from among the trees, hoarsely calling: "Hold up, fellows; that nifty Micky O'Toole is down there swimmin'. Let's teach him and his gang to stay where they belong, at the other end of the town."

Arming themselves with pine-cones and sticks and clods of earth, the party, at a signal from Bill, swept down the bank like an avalanche and discharged their missiles as one man at the offending Micky. The suddenness of the onslaught staggered Micky, but he quickly recovered himself and hurriedly made for the opposite shore, where, from the shelter of a tree, he answered their screams of laughter with words of defiance. Soon he disappeared, with a final taunt for any fellow to come over if he wanted a licking.

The next minute all were disporting themselves in the water, having a jolly good time, if one might judge from the roars of merriment that arose on every side.

All at once a sharp cry of pain rang out, followed by a sliding and rattling and scuffling as something crashed down the steep bank just by the bend.

"Whistling fishes!" exclaimed Pete Hamilton, as he arrived on the scene, "if it ain't Jim Warner—and something's wrong with his arm, too!"

He was right. Jim had slipped at the top of the slope, had fallen heavily on his arm, and then rolled down the bank.

When Captain Dunsmore mustered his men on the ballground the following day any one could see with half an eye that the Boyceville team had lost all hope, although still prepared to fight their hardest. But Will Brant couldn't pitch worth a cent and he was the best they had.

The game was just about ready to begin when Captain Jack felt someone tap him on the shoulder. Looking around he saw Micky O'Toole, his freckled face adorned with a broad, friendly grin.

"Say," he said, "I hear you fellows are hard up for a pitcher. I can pitch a little myself, and if I can help you out—why, I'm willing."

"You're a trump, Micky!" cried Jack, shaking him heartily by the hand. "It's downright splendid of you after the way the fellows treated you yesterday."

As Micky had modestly suggested, he could pitch a little—indeed, it was said that he was a shade better than Jim Warner, the star.

Boyceville, of course, won the game, and you may rest assured that Micky went swimming in the Old Swimming Hole whenever he pleased thereafter.

CONUNDRUMS.

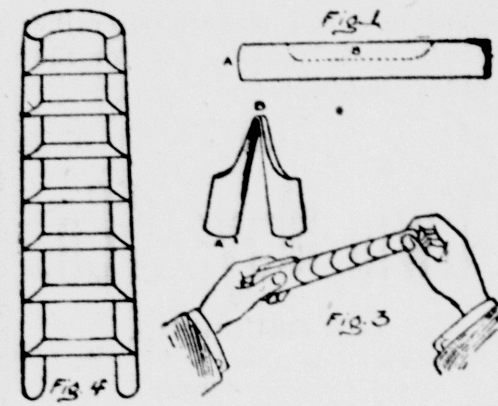

Why cannot a butcher be an honest man? Because he steels his knives.

What is the difference between a soldier and a bomb shell? One goes to war and the other goes to pieces.

What letter is most useful to a deaf woman? A, because it makes "her" hear.—Detroit Free Press.

THE MAGIC LADDER.

Have you seen a "strong man" do tricks? Here is a trick you can do on a small scale which will make a very pretty little paper ladder. Take a strip of paper about 24 inches long by six wide. Roll it loosely but evenly, so that your thumb (if you are a little chap) or your forefinger (if you are a grown-up) will slip easily into the roll. Press the roll flat and with sharp scissors cut out a piece as marked by dotted lines, which will make the roll look boat-shaped. Then press the center of the bottom of the little boat between B up and A and C down, and make a sharp crease at B, as in figure

How It Is Made.

2. Then, holding the ends A and C lightly in the left hand, grasp one fold of the paper at B out of the broken roll and keep on pulling (see figure 3) gently and firmly until the ladder is complete. The sides of the ladder should be even, says Good Literature, so that it may be shut up again, like a telescope. A little practice will make perfect in this and amuse little people and big.

The "strong man" does this with an enormous roll of paper which he tears with his fingers, instead of using scissors.

CAN YOU DO IT?

How to Pierce a Nickel with a Needle.

To pierce a nickel with a needle, especially if the needle be a very fine one, seems a difficult, if not an insoluble, problem. It is, nevertheless, a very simple feat.

To succeed, insert a needle in a cork, so that the point be just apparent, and, if the needle project at the other end, snap off the remainder of it with a pair of shears.

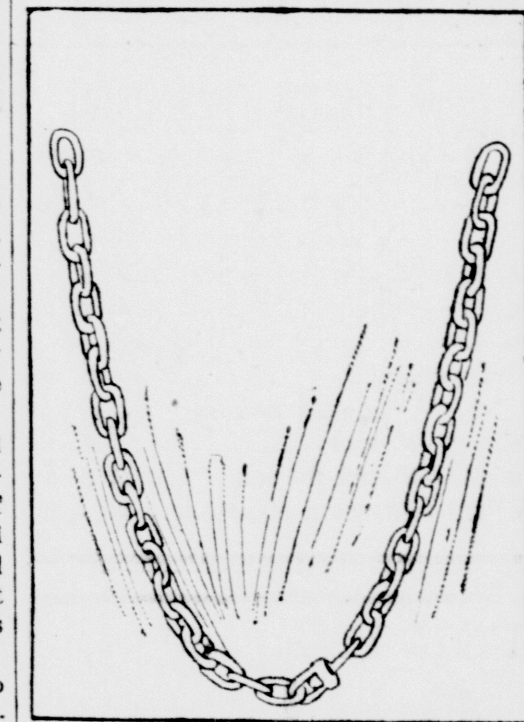

Now place your nickel on a couple of wooden blocks, as in the illustration, and strike a sharp blow with a heavy hammer on the prepared cork that you have placed above it; or it will do if the nickel is simply laid upon a single block of soft wood.

The needle, being unable to bend either way, thanks to the friendly support of the cork, is forced to go one way, and will pierce the nickel, or even a quarter, with the greatest ease; for, as we know, the steel of the needle is harder than the bronze or the silver of the coin.—Magical Experiments.

CUT WITH A PENKNIFE.

The chain shown in the accompanying photograph represents a prodigious example of industry and skill, having been cut out of a solid piece of oak by a Suffolk, England, man some 60 years ago, the only tool used being an ordinary pocketknife. Measuring about three and one-half feet in length, the chain itself contains 35 links, with a swivel in the center, which latter must have been the most difficult part of the carver's handiwork. In spite of this, however, the whole was completed without a flaw or join, and it is probable that this is the longest piece of carved chain-work of its kind extant.

None Lost.

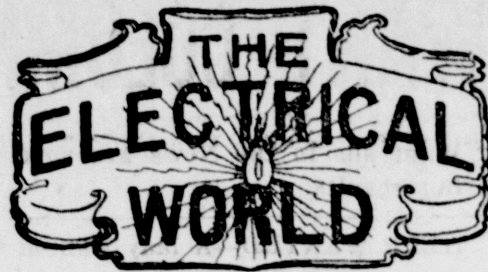

Sand Bar ferry, near Augusta, Ga., is a flatboat affair, frail and rickety. Two timid ladies, hesitating to cross, plied the negro boatman with questions about it, says Youth's Companion.

"And are you perfectly sure no one has ever been lost here?" they demanded.

"No, missus," replied the ferryman. "No one ain't ever been lost here. Marse Jake Bristow done got spilled out and drowned last week, but dey found 'im again nex' day. We ain't never los' nobody, no, ma'am."

Uncle Jack—I suppose you ride on your donkey when you want to?

Johnny—Oh, no! I ride when the donkey wants me to.

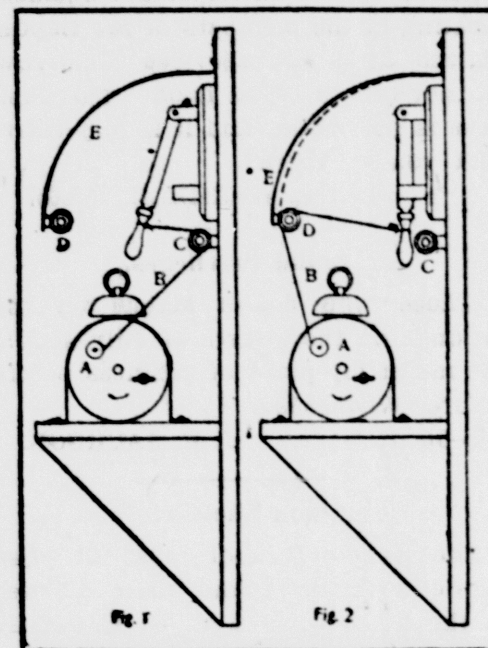

AUTOMATIC TIME SWITCH.

Can Be Used to Open or Close the Circuit.

This device can be used to either open or close the circuit at any desired time. An alarm clock is firmly fastened to a wooden bracket and provided with a small wood or metal drum, A, to which is fastened a cord, B. The other end of the cord is tied to the switch handle so that when the alarm goes off the switch is either opened or closed, depending on whether the cord is passed over pulley C or pulley D.

When the cord is passed over pulley C, as shown in Fig. 1, the circuit will be closed when the alarm goes off, but if it is passed over D the circuit will be opened. Pulley D is fastened to a piece of spring steel, E, which in operation is bent, as shown by the

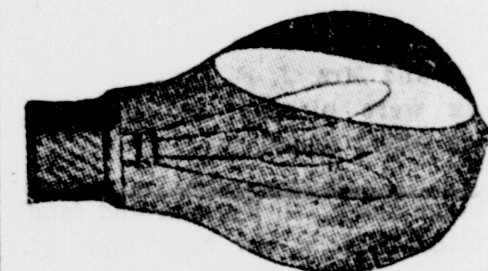

Will Open or Close Circuit as Desired.

To draw a circle on glass with a pen compass, paste a small piece of cardboard on the glass and push the center point of the compass into the cardboard.

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM.

Instrument Which Receives and Delivers Messages at Long Range.

The latest time-saving addition to business system is a little instrument which enables the head of a business or department to converse with one or all of his subordinate officers in an ordinary tone of voice, in any part of his office, and without holding the apparatus to his ear or mouth. Their replies will come to him in like fashion, so that the whole conversation will be just the same as if all parties were talking together in one room. If the manager wishes to communicate with one person only, he can easily make it impossible for anyone else to overhear, and if he wishes to keep the replies secret from someone in his own office, there is a receiver which he can use in the ordinary way.

Poulson Wireless Progressing.

Vladimir Poulson, the Danish inventor, expects soon to establish wireless communication across the Atlantic from Denmark to America. He has erected a station a few miles from Copenhagen and an American station will be completed in a few weeks. His system is based on "singing" electric waves which, he says, have inexhaustible power, where the spark system loses energy over long distances. Mr. Poulson first perfected his system for a distance of 40 miles, increasing it to 190, 380 and 760 miles; now he declares that he can operate over greater distances than the Atlantic's breadth.

Wireless Station on Airship.

The possibilities and practical utility of wireless telegraphy in aerial navigation will be thoroughly investigated aboard Count Zeppelin's airship this summer. A wireless station has been installed on the craft, in which, instead of extending upward as in other stations, the receiver extends downward, consisting of a bronze wire 300 feet long. Power from the airship's two 80-hp. motors works the transmitter, which is capable of sending messages 150 miles.

Nitrogen Gas.

The use of nitrogen gas has been tried in France for inflating tires.

POWER OF ELECTRICITY.

Railways of the World to Be Operated By This Irresistible Force.

Electricity now completely dominates the urban railway systems of America and Europe, and is invading with irresistible force that of suburban and interurban railroads to such an extent that it would be difficult to enumerate them even in the United States.

The systems which reach out from Boston, with connections which extend 40, 50 and even 100 miles, are only a sample of the wonderful development of the last 15 years, while the projects for future means of transportation in New England are so comprehensive as to exclude the use of steam by all the companies which operate transportation lines for passengers and freight within a radii of 50 miles at least from all large centers of population.

A single line, from Indianapolis to Cincinnati, a distance of 120 miles, already enjoys a large traffic in both freight and passengers, and the New York Central railroad company proposes to at once install electricity in place of steam to a distance of 40 miles in all its vast system radiating from New York city.

In Europe one of the longest electric lines is from Liverpool to Southampton, although many projects of even more gigantic proportions are under way throughout England.

Most of these lines are in regions where there are not sufficient waterfalls from which to generate power. But where there are waterfalls—the surest, easiest and most economical source of energy in the world—there is no reason why the electric engine may not supersede steam entirely while it seems positive that a great region which has no railroads would, if lines were to be built, adopt the electric system, even though there were no water power, and having that, would not hesitate in the choice.

The Italian government, in conjunction with the railroads, has been carrying on successful experiments and extending the use of electricity for nearly ten years, and now a line is being fitted up from Rome to Civita- Castellana.

The governments of Norway and Sweden are already occupied with the application of electricity to the larger lines; France is equipping roads with it as fast as possible, and being outdone by Germany; Switzerland is adopting it as rapidly as possible; Spain has awakened to the importance of electric railways, and is about to build one nearly 100 miles long; Mexico has just equipped one of over 100 miles, and the United States has many which are still larger. Even in Colombia, where there are practically no railroads, the most prominent engineers, in consultation with Pres. Reyes, are contemplating the utilization of the vast torrents now plunging to waste from the precipitous mountains, to operate new railroads which they declare will be "the wonder of the world."

ELECTRIC BOUQUET.

A Novelty Which is Proving Very Popular.

A pleasing electric novelty which any electrician can easily make is the electric bouquet. The idea is suited to many occasions, such as receptions, weddings and presentations. In a large bouquet or design of natural flowers are placed small incandescent lamps, either white or colored, arranged in the form of letters to produce either initials or words. For example, says Popular Mechanics, on the recent occasion of a reception given by his employees to their manager on his return from a long absence a mammoth bouquet of roses was presented to him, in the middle of which glowing in soft colors was the word "Welcome." Current was taken from a wall bracket through a flexible cord 20 feet long, which permitted the bouquet to be carried about the room.

The Electric Bouquet.

Moving Pictures of the Heart.

By the use of X-rays and the cinematograph, an apparatus for repeatedly photographing moving objects at very brief intervals, scientists have succeeded in photographing movements of internal organs like the heart and lungs. These moving pictures when reproduced on a screen are of great assistance to medical men.

Hydraulic Sluicing.

Hydraulic sluicing is being employed at Seattle, Wash., for the removal of a large hill in the residential section of the city. The material consists principally of blue clay, which is exceedingly tenacious and hard to move, but is easily handled by a six-inch giant nozzle at 120-pound pressure hydraulic. The supply of water is taken from Puget Sound, some 2,500 feet distant.

Steal Telephone Wire.

A gang of expert thieves stripped telephone poles of wire for a distance of three blocks in Chicago, recently, and secured in all about 600 pounds of copper.

Miss Betty's Cavalier

BY ZONA GALE

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

As he turned the corner the new rector's heart was beating. There was nothing formidable about the great gabled house; yet, as he walked up the drive his agitation increased. There was a glimpse of pink muslin on the veranda that was most disquieting.

However, he went on, and a bend in the drive revealed Miss Betty Sheridan standing upon a chair training roses. The picture, which would have agitated even a quiet heart, caused the rector to contemplate retreat. Instead, being a brave man, he stood at the foot of the steps and said gently:

"Good morning, Miss Betty."

Betty looked down and nodded bewitchingly, and stooped to extend her hand over the back of the chair.

"You'll forgive my not getting down?" she asked. "This is a critical moment. Max, please find Mr. Armory a chair."

From the vine-covered piazza came forth a big, languid figure, who gave the final touch to the uneasiness of the rector. Since his coming to the parish of St. Luke's, three months before, and since he had first seen Betty Sheridan on the same day, he had felt a secret and most un-Christian repugnance for this big cavalier, who seemed always within sound of her voice.

"How do, Mr. Armory?" said the big cavalier in flannels, looking uncomfortably handsome—uncomfortably to the rector. "Come up and be cool. It's a pretty warm morning."

"Very," admitted the rector. "Ah—very."

"You ought not to be so busy this warm weather," volunteered Betty—and Betty was never so alluring as when she advised people for their own good.

"My duties are my pleasures," said the rector. "This, for instance, Miss Sheridan."

This big cavalier in flannels, with hands that one instantly knew could send a ball over a net or across a course with unerring stroke, was very like what the rector himself dreamed in his college days of becoming. This cavalier was one of her world—of Betty Sheridan's world. But to the rector had come the struggle that had ended in his taking orders, and some way since his coming to this somewhat distracted parish there had been no time to lift either his golf sticks or his foils from their long rest. Instead, there had been a ceaseless round of visits—which reminded him:

"Miss Betty," he said. "I have come to enlist your sympathy this morning."

Poor Agnes had had a severe fall. "She will be quite helpless, they fear, for months."

The rose bough flew up with a little puff of fragrance, and Betty stepped down from the chair, and sat opposite the rector.

"Oh," she said, "the poor girl! What will they do? I'll go see her to-day."

"I thought that you would," said the rector, with a little catch in his breath. Betty's face was even more beautiful when she was in earnest than when she was mocking.

"Why, yes," said the big cavalier in the doorway. "I'll drive you over after luncheon, Betty. But you'll have to be back for the tennis finals, you know."

"Yes, Max," said Betty, without looking at him. "And will you ask your mother if we may have some of her roses, too? I am so sorry, Mr. Armory. We will not fail you."

The Reverend Mr. Armory was ashamed of his sinful rebellion at that "we." The very fact that Betty did not look at the big cavalier when he talked, and that she ordered him about and took him and his mother's roses for granted, disturbed the rector's peace of mind.

Sitting beside poor Agnes Chapman that afternoon, the Reverend Mr. Armory experienced sore trials of the spirit. His heart, which went out to the stricken girl, at the same time bounded so suddenly at the lightest footfall outside that he was deeply in doubt as to his right to be there at all, engaged in ministrations. When at last Betty appeared in the doorway with her arms filled with roses, not even the memory of whose mother's roses they were could put out the sudden passionate joy in the rector's eyes. He sat mutely near while Betty bent over the sick girl, and Betty's hair in the sun, Betty's little hand on the coarse spread, Betty's wonderful voice filled the shabby room with wonder. The Reverend Mr. Armory walked to the window to hide his emotion. And outside, stepping leisurely in the beating sun of the steep little street, his eye fell upon a bay horse and a low phaeton and the big cavalier—all waiting patiently for Betty.

The rector then turned from the window, his eyes hardening.

"Don't let us detain you too long, Miss Sheridan," he said evenly. "It is very hot in the street—for your friend to wait."

Betty looked up wonderingly.

"Who—Max?" she said. "Oh—Max."

Then she lifted her chin a little in displeased surprise.

"Very well," she said, "I will come some other time when I find Agnes alone."

She was gone in a moment and the room was stuffy and sunny and unbearable as before, and the phaeton wheels were clattering down the rough street. Horror at his sinful jealousy and petty speech possessed the rector, and he turned to the poor thin face on the pillow in a passion of remorse.

The rector passed his own gate that night and went on to the chapel. He was suddenly profoundly disturbed at to his own spiritual condition. When had he ever harbored such sinful thoughts toward another?

It was still and cool in the dim little chapel. The rector sank down in a pew and buried his face in his hands. Almost the burden was greater than he could bear, he thought, as he looked ahead on the dreary days of joyless toil. For, his sad heart told him, he could no longer regulate his own dreams, to say nothing of his rebellious spirit; else why should he, waking and sleeping, be dreaming of some one whom he was doomed forever to watch while she moved in that other world—her world—peopled by a train of cavaliers whose interests were like her own.

The rector rose suddenly. He had never had the luxury of time for sorrow. He turned to the door, and it opened and Betty came in. She was in white, with roses in her belt, and to the Reverend Mr. Armory she was like an angelic presence in the gray chapel. Her cheeks were flushed and she was in some adorable hesitation.

"Mr. Armory," she said, beseechingly, "I saw you come here—and I came to tell you—I was horrid and stupid this afternoon—you must forgive me—will you?"

She held out her hand. Before he knew the rector had taken it in both his own and stood looking down at her in a humil of thankfulness, and a fear that was sweet, like hope. "It was I," he said brokenly. "You must forgive me. You don't know what your coming there meant to me—you don't know how happy it made me. But then I—the thought that that sort of thing was my whole life to me, and just a sort of interlude to you, made me wretched and rebellious. Don't you see? It made us seem so hopelessly apart. I seemed so outside your world—and I didn't want that. I wanted—"

"You Must Forgive Me—Will You?"

The rector stopped, amazed at his own daring.

But Betty did not stop him. She met his eyes, and her own faltered a little, and her hand fluttered in his, and lay still. The rector of St. Marks looked down at her, a great, incredulous dawning in his eyes.

"Did you think," said Betty then, a little defiantly, "that I wanted to go away when I did? To leave—to leave there—"

Betty said "there," but her tone was "you," and the rector heard. And still he doubted—she was so throbbing with life, so keen in her love for the vague, glittering interests which the big cavalier shared—

"Betty," said the rector, almost warningly, "Betty—"

But the warning did not even serve himself. He drew her close to him, imprisoning her hands, compelling her eyes.

"Betty!" he cried, ringingly, "do you know what that means?"

Betty's head was hidden, but he heard.

"I've known since this afternoon," she said, "when I had to go and play tennis, and leave you there."

Had to go and play tennis. Had to go with the big cavalier! Had to leave that stuffy little room—and him!

All the silent chapel was suddenly filled with little singing voices that followed them, when, presently, they were in the street, and at the gate of the gabled house. Around the corner was disappearing the big cavalier, and beside him a gown of ruffled blue.

Betty laughed suddenly. "That's Charlotte," she said. "We didn't expect her till to-morrow. After she came Max was crazy at having to drive me down to—to you, at Chapman's. But I wanted to come and I made him."

"Charlotte?" questioned the rector, in a kind of happy spell.

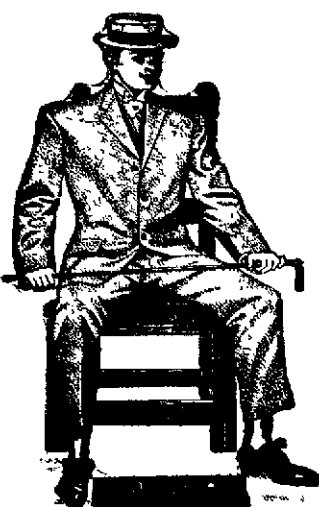

Betty glanced up wonderingly.

"Oh, I forgot that you wouldn't know," she said. "It's my sister Charlotte. They—they are in love, too."

"Too!" cried the rector rapturously.

WEAVER WOULD ARBITRATE

Tangle in Congressional Nomination Remains--Ferris Insists All Was Fair

Oklahoma City, Okla. June 28.—Claude Weaver of Pauls Valley, contesting the democratic congressional nomination in the Fifth district, is here tonight consulting with attorneys looking to an adjustment of the controversy by the state election board or through a primary. Mr. Weaver claims to have held 113 out of 228 votes without dispute against 115 that are claimed by Scott Ferris of Lawton. In addition to these there were 28 votes from Cleveland, Pottawatomie and McClain counties which he insists were regularly for him but were contested, and the contest has not been determined. With these votes he shows he is the nominee.

Tonight Mr. Weaver telegraphed Mr. Ferris offering to arbitrate the matter through a primary.

If I can not establish my right to the nomination, said Mr. Weaver tonight, "I will not allow my name to go before the people in this race. Decision in the proper authority will be final with me."

Mr. Weaver is a native of Gainesville. He graduated from the Texas University law department in 1887 being a classmate of congressman Henry of Texas and R. B. L. Knight of Dallas. Mr. Ferris is from Missouri.

Lawton, Okla., June 28.—Hon. Scott Ferris of this city, who was nominated for congress by the assembled delegation of the Fifth congressional district at Hobart yesterday, in response to the reports that have gone broadcast relative to the alleged practice of fraud in the nomination, tonight made the following statement from his headquarters:

My nomination was in all things regular. I am thankful to my friends for their loyal support, and I promise to make a race that the Fifth congressional district democrats will be proud of. Following is the 296th ballot, on which I was nominated: Comanche 20 votes, Fillman 7, Jackson 13, Kiowa 15, McLain 10, Cleveland 15, Pottawatomie 16, Grady 19, making a total of 115 votes the number required to nominate.

Judge W. H. Hussey, chairman of the convention said tonight: "The result of the 296th ballot was announced by the secretary and the chairman. I declared the number of votes cast a majority and Scott Ferris the nominee of the convention. A motion to adjourn was regularly made and seconded. It was announced by the chair it was carried and I declared the convention adjourned sine die."

SUPPLICATE CONGRESS AGAIN

Possibility That Congress and Not the President Will Pass on the Constitution

Guthrie, Okla., June 28.—If the legal point raised by Attorney General Bonaparte in considering the Oklahoma constitution involving the authority of congress to delegate the execution of its constitutional power to the president is sustained the new state may, after all have to become a suppliant at the doors of congress in order to secure a seat in the federal union. Under the circumstances congress would become the sole judge of Oklahoma's qualifications, and accept it or not as it chose.

The question arising from the grant of exclusive power in the federal constitution saying congress may admit new states, necessarily carrying with it the duty in this case of determining whether the enabling act has been complied with, and that the constitution is republican in form. It is doubtful so expressed in the law office in Washington whether this function construed to be legislative can, with legal effect be exercised by the executive branch of the government, and while Mr. Bonaparte, who voluntarily brought the subject up with the convention's delegation in Washington several weeks ago, had not then reached a conclusion, there was strong belief that congress in this particular had erred.

Five states have been brought into the union by proclamation of the president under enabling acts, all of which the Oklahoma act was mainly fashioned and in those instances the executive from words of proclamations was the sole judge as to whether the constitution met the requirements.

Democrats interested in the Oklahoma situation are waiting to see how closely the law office will follow the precedent to making its recommendations to the president.

The president, whose duty is believed to be only ministerial, is quoted as favoring Oklahoma's admission, notwithstanding the broad statement frequently made that he would turn the constitution down. By ordering a census of the two territories for the purpose of fixing the population, it is demonstrated that Washington proposes to accept no one's word as to conditions here but will secure evidence from agents specially detailed in the field.

There is, however, a political condition presented which might make it desirable not to have Oklahoma in the Union until after the next presidential election, and the unfortunate constitutional tangle may furnish the national leaders, who it appears, can not control the president in this matter, the avenue for shifting the responsibility to congress, where it can be accepted with more or less impunity.

Let Off With $5.00 Fine

Mary, the negro woman who shot Tom Thomas Friday, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Winn today and after investigating the trouble she concluded she was guilty of no more than an assault. So she was let off with a $5.00 fine.

It seems she is not really Tom's wife, though they have lived together for a long time. At least she says they are not married, and her name is Mary Gibbs.

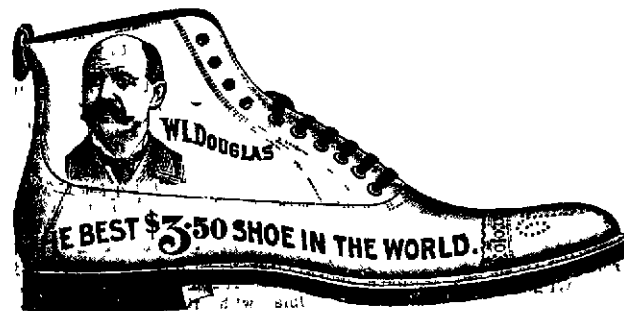

Flung a Brick at Flying Jenny

John Hughes, the Western Union messenger boy, occupied the boards in the mayor's court this morning. He was charged with disturbing the peace in that last night, because the merry-go-round man at the carnival would not permit him to ride on a pump which they claimed was no good, later he threw a brick at the man, but it missed him and grazed a lady's shoulder. The jury found him guilty, but the case was appealed.

The Old Roman

Could anyone come away from the democratic state convention, without feeling the greatest admiration for that noble old democratic Roman, Judge Furman? There he stood with the second highest vote of any of the seven candidates, and yet, due to the rule of the state committee, one senator must come from each territory, hence Judge Furman failed to realize the honorable ambition of his life. Yet his democracy was above his personal ambition, and not a regret or protest was uttered by him. Indeed, his only wish seemed to be for the success of democracy—New State Tribune

SHOT BY HIS DARLING WIFE

Negro and Spouse Quarrel--Repelling an Attack With Chair She Shoots Him in the Mouth

Tom Thomas a young negro residing in the Black Bottoms had a difficulty with his wife, Mary, Friday afternoon at 5:30. Result Tom lies with a dangerous bullet wound in the neck and Mary languishes in the federal jail charged with the shooting.

As the story runs Tom and his wife quarreled Friday morning and she went away to the house of a neighbor, Doris Rhodes. In the afternoon he went to Doris and remonstrated with his wife, emphasizing the argument with a chair and other household articles. In repelling his savage attack, Mary says she grabbed her revolver, a small 32-caliber affair, and fired. The bullet struck Tom in the mouth, lodging in the back of his neck. His wife went immediately to the United States marshal's office and surrendered. Surgical attendance was secured at once for the wounded negro and his recovery is thought quite possible. Of course the wife will be held in custody awaiting the effect of the wound.

Tom was in the employ of the cotton firm of Frierson Bros., and he and his wife have heretofore been considered quite orderly negroes.

OKLAHOMA'S STRUGGLE FOR STATEHOOD.

Under the caption above the Dallas News summarizes our statehood status in the following editorial, which seems to fear our democracy has taken a little too much advantage:

There seems to be every likelihood now that the people of Oklahoma will have an early opportunity to pass judgment on the work of those whom they commissioned to make a constitution. The News' understanding of the matter is that the constitution may now be submitted to a vote, notwithstanding any appeal that may be taken from the Oklahoma supreme court's decision that it has no authority to review the acts of the convention, a body which has almost the plenary power of the people themselves. The decision amounts to a declaration that it is not for the court to determine, in such a proceeding, as was brought against the convention of officers, whether any of the provisions of the constitution that are objected to are subject to or are not compatible with the federal constitution. Chairman Murray has very promptly taken steps to have the constitution submitted to the people, and even should the supreme court hold to a view contrary to that which has been taken by the Oklahoma tribunal, its decision will come too late to prevent action by the people.

The decision as to whether the proposed constitution is a substantial compliance with the enabling act, will, in all probability, therefore, be made by the president. After the constitution shall have been adopted, any specific thing done by virtue of the power it confers may be challenged in the courts, and in that way the question as to whether any of the provisions of the instrument are in conflict with the federal constitution will be answered by the highest tribunal in the land.

It seems to be assumed, and doubtless correctly, that the part of it picked out as most vulnerable to attack is that which prescribes the political subdivisions. The News has no doubt that the hand that marked off the senatorial, representative and congressional districts was guided by a full consideration of party advantage. The thing has been done before, indeed, so frequently that we should have been astonished if the democrats of Oklahoma had foreborne to emulate the bad example. The president has ordered that a census be made of every proposed subdivision, and Mr. Murray has appointed a committee to consider whatever objections the republicans may have to the plan of districting agreed on. We ought to get considerable enlightenment from those proceedings.

If the gerrymander amounts to a disfranchisement of voters, the democrats would do well to correct it at once. A gerrymander, although a discrimination against the opposing party, is not necessarily tantamount to a disfranchisement of voters; but if the apportionment provided for in the constitution amounts to that, it would be unmitigated folly for the democrats to persist in it. Such an injustice as that would be a valid reason for denying admission to Oklahoma, and it must be obvious to the democrats there that the president will be content with less than a valid reason. Prudence will prompt them to yield something of the advantage enjoyed by their political opponents in having their partisan in the White house.

DO IT NOW

Cut your weeds.

Have you cut those weeds? If you haven't, DO IT NOW.

Cheer up. Ada may be floating on a sea of oil for all you know.

What's the matter with that pottery? Let's get somebody interested.

Hold your breath—the drill is nearing the gas pocket or oil pool—either one. We will tell you which later on.

The Katy railroad enjoys the police protection of the city. Then why should she not obey its ordinances? They should be given a trial, at least.

Politics is uncertain, but it is reasonably sure that Oklahoma will be a democratic state, with seven votes in the college, if admitted in time to vote in the election next year. Those seven votes may decide the thing, as did the three votes of Colorado thirty-two years earlier. History sometimes repeats itself. The g. o. p. is human, and it is only natural for it to file a protest against adding seven votes to the democratic column in the college in 1908. But there is another consideration. The thing would be transparent, and it would be arbitrary. Deep seated in the American character is a love of fair play, and an injury visited on Oklahoma might be resented in some other communities where the republican fences are not so secure as they were. And it is possible that is what will fetch Oklahoma into the election of 1908.—Washington Post.

RED RIVER NAVIGATION.

Morris Sheppard Visits Paris in Connection With the Project.

Paris, Texas, June 28.—Congressman Morris Sheppard is in the city, gathering data in regard to the tonnage on Red River, to be embodied in the report of the engineer of this district for the fiscal year ending June 30. He called on Secretary Ragland of the Board of Trade, Captain S. J. Wright and others, and will go tomorrow to Fort Towson, I. T., to interview George I. Harvey, who is operating a steamboat on the river in the lumber business. He says he has already visited the lower section of the river and finds great interest taken in the subject of navigation. One lumber company is constructing six large barges at Fulton, Ark. and has had a 60-horsepower steamboat built at Cairo, Ill., to pull them. The Ames Shovel and Tool company, which has a plant here, has purchased a small boat at Lyons, Iowa, to raft logs down to Archer City to ship over the Frisco to Paris. It will be introduced as an experiment and will not attempt to haul logs up stream, but will be used to push and guide the rafts. With these two boats and the government snagboat quarter boats operating on Upper Red river, within the next two or three months, Congressman Sheppard says the era of actual navigation will have really begun.

Douglas' Prospects Rising.

Judge W. C. Raymond, the recognized head of the republican party in this territory, is carefully preparing his slate for republican party nominations, and is likely to select Clarence B. Douglas, one of the attaches of the Muskogee Phoenix as one of the two candidates for members of the legislature. While Judge Raymond endorses that Mr. Douglas is without experience qualifying him for such important duties as will devolve upon the first state legislature, yet he insists that as he will select a man of experience for the other member, and has confidence that there is good material in Mr. Douglas for development of legislative ability. Of course, the Tribune believes that the democratic nominees will be elected to represent Muskogee county in the legislature, and yet we are glad to see care taken by both parties to nominate good men but the importance of the first legislature suggests the impropriety of going too far with experiments.—New State Tribune

NEW STATE NOTES.

(From The Oklahoman)
Real estate dealers at Ardmore have perfected an organization.

Wheat is reported as making an excellent yield in Custer county.

Johnnie Smith, a little boy, was instantly killed by being struck by lightning near Loco.

The republican party in Oklahoma appears to have lost track of its bell weather.

After all the people of Indian Territory have no great dread of the sting of the Asp.

The man who does not lend a helping hand in promoting the welfare of his town and county should make room for another, says Alverson of the Loco Ledger.

It is somewhat novel to have the "blocks of five" graduates of Indian offer advice to the people of the new state relative to political morals.

As a result of the wheat shortage and the rising price of flour, the Oklahoma consumer must convince himself that the half loaf is better than the whole.

The town of Thomas is now on the dry list, but there are several applications for liquor license before the county commissioners.

The towns of Oklahoma can have no better advertisement than shady and clean streets, nice parks and handsomely painted houses.

The Madill News makes this comment relative to the vanishing joys of life: "Constable Grider captured and smashed 76 bottles of booze at the depot Friday evening."

A deposit of white marble susceptible of a high polish has been discovered near Thomas, Okla. The extent of the deposit has not been ascertained, but a quarry is to be opened at once.

It remained for an Oklahoma man to discover that the 2-cent fare in Missouri counts for little, as the railroads there only carry 100 pounds of baggage free, when the former limit was 150 pounds.

Judge Raymond, in discussing President Roosevelt's motives in calling for a census enumeration in the new state, is merely speaking the sentiment of the ebony-hued section of the republican party, of which he is the major domo.

The republican party in Oklahoma was so busily engaged in hammering the constitution that it exhausted its strength and paralyzed its nerve centers. It is apparently unable to present a respectable front in the state campaign now at hand.

The newspapers at Lawton have published a joint announcement that they have tired of boosting the town when the business men there carry all their printing to the job printing houses. The appeal is strong and sensible and should be fruitful of results.

The parents of Fred Ratcliff, a Vinton boy, have just received a letter from him dated at Dawson, Yukon, telling of the 400-mile trip down the Yukon river from White Horse, in an open boat. He says in that part of the world the sun rises at 3:30 in the afternoon and sets at 9:30 at night.

"Oklahoma owes everything to the republican party," says the Clio Chieftain. The statement is rather broad in its scope. It does in fact, owe much to the republican party: Years of misrule, exile from statehood for years, a reign of graft under territorial rule that is almost without parallel. Yes, Oklahoma owes much to the republican party and the debt will be paid when statehood is secured.

GOOD FOR EVIL

How Micky Won the Game for the Boyceville Nine

Fellows we've just got to win the game tonight. Those Jonesville chaps have been strutting around in a way that's unbearable ever since they beat us last year. We've got to take the pride out of them and that in a hurry.

Captain Jack Dunsmore's delivery of this speech made a profound impression on his listeners among whom were the entire Boyceville nine and three or four of their loyal supporters.

Well Jim Warner's arm is entirely well again and if he takes care of himself until tomorrow I don't see how we can help winning. And Catcher Hobbs in the test of the group must have done all right.

But all reach the swimming hole first. Called Hill Wolf sprinting down the dusty road at a mad pace as the clamor of trees that marked their favorite bathing place came into view. I never bow there accepted the challenge and away they dashed rising such a cloud of dust as would have done credit to a herd of cattle.

Hill Wolf dived down the long slope that led to the edge of the creek but before he had gone half way he reappeared and among the trees he was calling. Hold up fellows, that new Micky O'Leary is down the creek swimming. Let's teach him and he gang to swim where this belongs at the other end of the town.

Arming themselves with pine cones and sticks and clods of earth the party at a signal from Hill swept down the bank like an avalanche and discharged their missiles as one man at the offending Micky. The suddenness of the onslaught staggered Micky but he quickly recovered himself and hurriedly made for the opposite shore where from the shelter of a tree he watched their screams of laughter with words of defiance. Soon he disappeared with a final shout for any fellow to come over if he wanted a licking.

The next minute all were disputing their lives in the water having a jolly good time if one might judge from the roars of merriment that arose on every side.

All at once a sharp cry of pain rang out followed by a sliding and rattling and scuffling as something crashed down the steep bank just by the bend.

Whistling fishes exclaimed Pete Hamilton as he arrived on the scene. It was Jim Warner—and some things wrong with his arm too.

He was right. Jim had slipped at the top of the slope had fallen heavily on his arm and then rolled down the bank.

When Captain Dunsmore mustered his men on the ballground the following day any one could see with half an eye that the Boyceville team had lost all hope although still prepared to fight their hardest. But Will Brant couldn't pitch worth a cent and he was the best they had.

The game was just about ready to begin when Captain Jack felt some body tap him on the shoulder. Looking around he saw Micky O'Leary his freckled face adorned with a broad friendly grin.

Say he said I hear you fellows are hard up for a pitcher. I can pitch a little myself and if I can help you out—why I'm willing.

You're a trump Micky cried Jack shaking him heartily by the hand. It's downright splendid of you to do the way the fellows treated you yesterday.

As Micky had modestly suggested he could pitch a little—indeed it was said that he was a shade better than Jim Warner the star.

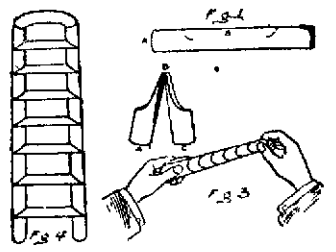

Boyceville of course won the game and you may rest assured that Micky went swimming in the Old Swimming Hole whenever he pleased thereafter. —Los Angeles Times

THE MAGIC LADDER.

Have you seen a strong man do tricks? Here is a trick you can do on a small scale which will make a very pretty little paper ladder. Take a strip of paper about 21 inches long by six wide. Roll it loosely but evenly so that your thumb (if you are a little chap) or your forefinger (if you are a grown up) will slip easily into the roll. Press the roll flat and with sharp scissors cut out a piece as marked by dotted lines which will make the roll look boat-shaped. Then press the center of the bottom of the little boat below B up and A and C down and make a sharp crease at B as in figure

How It Is Made

Then holding the ends A and C lightly in the left hand grasp one fold of the paper at B out of the broken roll and keep on pulling (see figure 3) gently and firmly until the ladder is complete. The sides of the ladder should be even says Good Literature so that it may be shut up again like a telescope. A little practice will make perfect in this and amuse little people and big.

The strong man does this with an enormous roll of paper which he tears with his fingers instead of using scissors.

CAN YOU DO IT?

How to Pierce a Nickel with a Needle

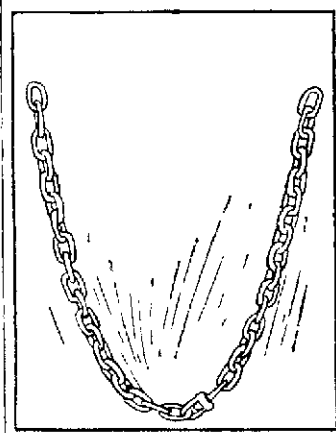

To pierce a nickel with a needle especially if the needle be a very fine one seems a difficult if not an insoluble problem. It is nevertheless a very simple feat. To succeed in it is to succeed in a cork so that the point of the needle is just in front and the needle is just at the other end and snap off the main part of it with a pair of shears.

Now place the nickel on a couple of white blotting papers in the illustration and strike a sharp blow with a heavy hammer on the prepared cork that you have placed above it. It will do it. The nickel is simply laid upon a single block of soft wood. The cork is placed in front of the nickel and the hammer is placed on the cork. The nickel is then struck with the hammer. The nickel is then struck with the hammer. The nickel is then struck with the hammer.

an ordinary pocketknife. Measuring about three and one half feet in length the chain itself contains 35 links with a swivel in the center which latter must have been the most difficult part of the carver's handiwork. In spite of this however the whole was completed without a flaw or joint and it is probable that this is the longest piece of carved chainwork of its kind extant.

AUTOMATIC TIME SWITCH.

Can Be Used to Open or Close the Circuit

This device can be used to either open or close the circuit at any desired time. An alarm clock is firmly fastened to a wooden bracket and provided with a small wood or metal drum A to which is fastened a cord B. The other end of the cord is tied to the switch handle so that when the alarm goes off the switch is either opened or closed depending on whether the cord is passed over pulley C or pulley D.

When the cord is passed over pulley C as shown in Fig 1 the circuit will be closed when the alarm goes off but if it is passed over D the circuit will be opened. Pulley D is fastened to a piece of spring steel E which in operation is bent as shown by the

Instrument Which Receives and Delivers Messages at Long Range

The latest time-saving addition to business system is a little instrument which enables the head of a business or department to converse with one or all of his subordinate officers in an ordinary tone of voice in any part of his office and without holding the apparatus to his ear or mouth. Their replies will come to him in like fashion so that the whole conversation will be just the same as if all parties were talking together in one room. If the manager wishes to communicate with one person only he can easily make it impossible for anyone else to overhear and if he wishes to see the replies secret from someone in his own office there is a receiver which he can use in the ordinary way.

Poulsen Wire was Progressing

Vladimir Poulsen the Danish inventor expects soon to establish wireless communication across the Atlantic from Denmark to America. He has erected a station a few miles from Copenhagen and an American station will be completed in a few weeks. His system is based on sending electric waves which he says have inexhaustible power where the spark system loses energy over long distances. Mr Poulsen first perfected his system for a distance of 40 miles increasing it to 190 380 and 760 miles now he declares that he can operate over greater distances than the Atlantic's breadth.

Wireless Station on Airship

The possibilities and practical utility of wireless telegraphy in aerial navigation will be thoroughly investigated aboard Count Zeppelin's airship this summer. A wireless station has been installed on the craft in which instead of extending upward as in other stations the receiver extends downward consisting of a bronze wire 300 feet long. Power from the air ships two 80-hp motors works the transmitter which is capable of sending messages 160 miles.

The use of nitrogen gas has been tried in France for inflating tires.

POWER OF ELECTRICITY

Railways of the World to Be Operated By This Irresistible Force

Electricity now completely dominates the urban railway systems of America and Europe and is invading with irresistible force that of suburban and interurban railroads to such an extent that it would be difficult to enumerate them even in the United States.

The systems which reach out from Boston with connections which extend 40 50 and even 100 miles are only a sample of the wonderful development of the last 15 years while the projects for future means of transportation in New England are so comprehensive as to exclude the use of steam by all the companies which operate transportation lines for passengers and freight within a radius of 50 miles at least from all large centers of population.

A single line from Indianapolis to Cincinnati a distance of 120 miles already enjoys a large traffic in both freight and passengers and the New York Central railroad company proposes to at once install electricity in place of steam to a distance of 40 miles in all its vast system radiating from New York city.

In Europe one of the longest electric lines is from Liverpool to South port although many projects of even more gigantic proportions are under way throughout England.

Most of these lines are in regions where there are not sufficient waterfalls from which to generate power. But where there are waterfalls—the surest easiest and most economical source of energy in the world—there is no reason why the electric engine must not supersede steam entirely while it seems positive that a great region which has no railroads would if lines were to be built adopt the electric system even though there were no water power and having that would not hesitate in the choice.

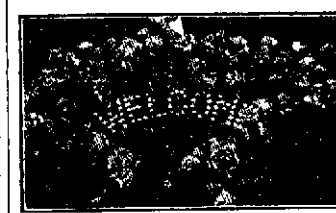

The Italian government in conjunction with the railroads has been carrying on successful experiments and extending the use of electricity for nearly ten years and now a line is being fitted up from Rome to Civita Castellana.

The governments of Norway and Sweden are already occupied with the application of electricity to the larger lines. France is equipping roads with it as fast as possible and being outdone by Germany Switzerland is adopting it as rapidly as possible. Spain has awakened to the importance of electric railways and is about to build one nearly 100 miles long. Mexico has just equipped one of over 100 miles and the United States has many which are still under way. In Colombia where there are practically no railroads the most prominent engineers are contemplating the utilization of the vast torrents now plunging to waste from the high mountains to operate new railroads which (they declare) will be the wonder of the world.

ELECTRIC BOUQUET

A Novelty Which is Proving Very Popular

A pleasing electric novelty which any electrician can easily make is the Electric Bouquet. The idea is suited to many occasions such as receptions weddings and jubilees. In a large bouquet or less of natural flowers are placed small incandescent lamps either white or colored arranged in the form of letters to produce either initials or words. For example says Popular Mechanics on the recent occasion of a reception given by his employees to their manager on his return from a long absence a mammoth bouquet of roses was presented to him in the middle of which glowing in soft colors was the word Welcome. Current was taken from a wall bracket through a flexible cord 20 feet long which permitted the bouquet to be carried about the room.

Hydraulic Sluicing

Hydraulic sluicing is being employed at Seattle Wash for the removal of a large hill in the residential section of the city. The material consists principally of blue clay which is exceedingly tenacious and hard to move but is easily handled by a six inch giant nozzle at 120 pound pressure hydraulic. The supply of water is taken from Puget Sound some 2500 feet distant.

Miss Betty's Cavalier

BY ZONA GALE

(Copyright by Joseph B. Bowles)

As he turned the corner the new rector's heart was beating. There was nothing formidable about the great gabled house yet as he walked up the drive his agitation increased. There was a glimpse of pink muslin on the veranda that was most disquieting.

However he went on and a bend in the drive revealed Miss Betty Sheridan standing upon a chair training roses. The picture which would have agitated even a quiet heart caused the rector to contemplate retreat. Instead being a brave man he stood at the foot of the steps and said gently:

Good morning Miss Betty.

Betty looked down and nodded levelly and stooped to extend her hand over the back of the chair.

You'll forgive my not getting down? she asked. This is a critical moment. Max please find Mr. Armory a chair.

From the vine covered piazza came forth a big languid figure who gave the final touch to the uneasiness of the rector. Since his coming to the parish of St. Luke's three months before and since he had first seen Betty Sheridan on the same day he had felt a secret and most unchristian repugnance for this big cavalier who seemed always within sound of her voice.

How do Mr. Armory? said the big cavalier in flannels looking uncomfortably handsome—uncomfortably to the rector. Come up and be cool. It's a pretty warm morning.

Very admitted the rector. Ah—very.

You ought not to be so busy this warm weather volunteered Betty—and Betty was never so abutting as when she advised people for their own good.

My duties are my pleasures said the rector. This for instance Miss Sheridan.

This big cavalier in flannels with hands that over instantly he could send a bill over a net or across a court with unerring stroke was very like what the rector himself dreamed in his college days of becoming. This cavalier was one of her world—of Betty Sheridan's world. But to the rector had come the struggle that had ended in his taking order and some way since his coming to this some what distant parish there had been no time to lift either his golf sticks or his toes from the floor. Instead of visits—which reminded him.

Miss Betty he said I have come to what you sympathize this morning.

Poor Max has had a severe fall. She will be quite helpless this morning.

The lost touch flew up with a wither of surprise and a step away from the chair and sat opposite the rector.

Oh she said the poor girl. What will they do. I'll go see her to day.

I thought that you would said the rector with a little catch in his breath. Betty's face was even more beautiful when she was in earnest than when she was mocking.

Why yes said the big cavalier in the doorway. I'll drive you over to lunch on Betty. But you'll have to be back for the tennis this afternoon.

Yes Max said Betty without looking at him. And will you ask your mother if we may have some of her roses too? I am so sorry Mr. Armory. We will not fail you.

The Reverend Mr. Armory was ashamed of his sinful rebellion at that. The very fact that Betty did not look at the big cavalier when he talked and that she ordered him about and took him and his mother's roses for granted disturbed the rector's peace of mind.

Sitting beside poor Max Chapman that afternoon the Reverend Mr. Armory experienced some trials of the spirit. His heart which went out to the stricken girl at the same time bounded so suddenly at the slightest footfall outside that he was kept in doubt as to his right to be there at all engaged in ministrations. When at last Betty appeared in the doorway with her arms filled with roses not even the memory of whose mother's roses they were could put out the sudden passionate joy in the rector's eyes. He sat mutely near while Betty bent over the sick girl and Betty's hair in the sun Betty's little hand on the coarse spread Betty's wonderful voice filled the shabby room with wonder. The Reverend Mr. Armory walked to the window to hide his emotion. And outside stepping leisurely in the beating sun of the steep little street his eye fell upon a bay horse and a low phaeton and the big cavalier—all waiting patiently for Betty.

The rector then turned from the window his eyes hardening.

Don't let us detain you too long Miss Sheridan he said evenly. It is very hot in the street—for your friend to wait.

Betty looked up wonderingly. Who—Max? she said. Oh—Max. Then she lifted her chin a little in displeased surprise.

Very well she said I will come some other time when I find Agnes alone.

She was gone in a moment and the room was stuffy and sunny and unbearable as before and the phaeton wheels were clattering down the rough street. Horror at his sinful jealousy and petty speech possessed the rector, and he turned to the poor thin face on the pillow in a passion of remorse.

The rector passed his own gate that night and went on to the chapel. He was suddenly profoundly disturbed to his own spiritual condition. When had he ever harbored such sinful thoughts toward another? It was still and cool in the dim little chapel. The rector sank down in a pew and buried his face in his hands. Almost the burden was greater than he could bear he thought as he looked ahead on the dreary days of joyless toil. For his sad heart told him he could no longer regulate his own dreams to say nothing of his rebelious spirit. Else why should he be waking and sleeping he dreaming of some one whom he was doomed forever to watch while she moved in that other world—her world—peopled by a train of cavaliers whose interests were like her own.

The rector rose suddenly. He had never had the luxury of time for sorrow. He turned to the door and it opened and Betty came in. She was in white with roses in her belt and to the Reverend Mr. Armory she was like an angelic presence in the gray chapel. Her cheeks were flushed and she was in some adorable hesitation.

Mr. Armory she said beseechingly I saw you come here—and I came to tell you—I was horrid and stupid this afternoon—you must forgive me—will you?

She held out her hand. Before he knew the rector had taken it in both his own and stood looking down at her in a humor of thankfulness and a fear that was sweet like hope. It was I he said brokenly. You must forgive me. You don't know what you coming there meant to me—you don't know how happy it made me. But then I—the thought that that sort of thing was my whole life to me and just a sort of interlude to you made me wild and rebellious. Don't you see? It made us seem so hopelessly apart. I seemed so outside your world—and I didn't want that. I wanted—

'You Must Forgive Me—Will You?'

The rector stopped amazed at his own daring.

But Betty did not stop him. She met his eyes and her own faltered a little and her hand fluttered in his and lay still. The rector of St. Marks looked down at her a great incredulous dawning in his eyes.

Did you think said Betty then a little defiantly that I wanted to go away when I did? To leave—to leave there—

Betty said then but her tone was soft and the rector heard. And still he doubted—she was so throbbing with life so keen in her love for the vague glittering interests which the big cavalier shared—

Betty said the rector almost warningly. Betty—

But the warning did not even serve himself. He drew her close to him imprisoning her hands compelling her eyes.

Betty he cried ringingly do you know what that means?

Betty's head was hidden but he heard.

I've known since this afternoon she said when I had to go and play tennis and leave you there.

Had to go and play tennis. Had to go with the big cavalier? Had to leave that stuffy little room—and him?

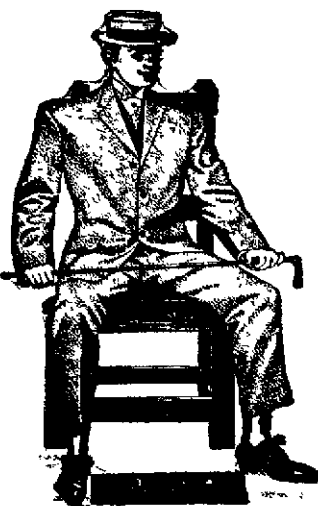

All the silent chapel was suddenly filled with little singing voices that followed them when presently they were in the street and at the gate of the gabled house. Around the corner was disappearing the big cavalier and beside him a gown of ruffled blue.

Betty laughed suddenly. That's Charlotte she said. We didn't expect her till tomorrow. After she came Max was crazy at having to drive me down to—to you at Chapman's. But I wanted to come and I made him.

Charlotte? questioned the rector in a kind of happy spell. Betty glanced up wonderingly. Oh I forgot that you wouldn't know she said. It's my sister Charlotte. They—they are in love too. Too! cried the rector rapturously.

WEAVER WOULD ARBITRATE

Tangle in Congressional Nomination Remains--Ferris Insists All Was Fair

Oklahoma City, Okla. June 28.—Claude Weaver of Pauls Valley, contesting the democratic congressional nomination in the Fifth district, is here tonight consulting with attorneys looking to an adjustment of the controversy by the state election board through a primary. Mr. Weaver claims to have held 113 out of 228 votes without dispute against 115 that are claimed by Scott Ferris of Lawton. In addition to these there were 28 votes from Cleveland, Pottawatomie and McClain counties which he insists were regularly for him but were contested, and the contest has not been determined. With these votes he shows he is the nominee.

Tonight Mr. Weaver telegraphed Mr. Ferris offering to arbitrate the matter through a primary. If I can not establish my right to the nomination said Mr. Weaver tonight, I will not allow my name to go before the people in this race. Decision by the proper authority will be final with me.

Mr. Weaver is a native of Gatesville. He graduated from the Texas law department in 1887 being a classmate of congressmen Henry of Texas and R. E. L. Knight of Dallas. Mr. Ferris is from Missouri.

Lawton, Okla. June 28.—Hon. Scott Ferris of this city, who was nominated for congress by the assembled delegation of the Fifth congressional district at Hobart yesterday, in response to the reports that have gone broadcast relative to the alleged practice of fraud in the nomination, tonight made the following statement from his headquarters.

My nomination was in all things regular. I am thankful to my friends for their loyal support, and I promise to make a race that the Fifth congressional district democrats will be proud of. Following is the 296th ballot, on which I was nominated Comanche 20 votes, Fillmore 7, Jackson 13, Kiowa 15, McClain 10, Cleveland 15, Pottawatomie 16, Grady 18 making a total of 115 votes the number required to nominate.

Judge W. H. Hussey, chairman of the convention said tonight: "The result of the 296th ballot was announced by the secretary and the chairman. I declared the number of votes cast a majority and Scott Ferris the nominee of the convention. A motion to adjourn was regularly made and seconded. It was announced by the chair it was carried and I declared the convention adjourned sine die."

SUPPLICATE CONGRESS AGAIN

Possibility That Congress and Not the President Will Pass on the Constitution

Guthrie, Okla. June 28.—If the legal point raised by Attorney General Bonaparte in considering the Oklahoma constitution involving the authority of congress to delegate the execution of its constitutional power to the president is sustained the new state may after all have to become a supplicant at the doors of congress in order to secure a seat in the federal union. Under the circumstances congress would become the sole judge of Oklahoma's qualifications, and accept it or not as it chose.

The question arising from the grant of exclusive power in the federal constitution saying congress may admit new states, necessarily carrying with it the duty in this case of determining whether the enabling act has been complied with, and that the constitution is republican in form. It is doubtful so expressed in the law of office in Washington whether this function construed to be legislative can, with legal effect be exercised by the executive branch of the government, and while Mr. Bonaparte, who voluntarily brought the subject up with the convention's delegation in Washington several weeks ago, had not then reached a conclusion, there was strong belief that congress in this particular had erred.

Five states have been brought into the Union by proclamation of the president under enabling acts after all of which the Oklahoma act was mainly fashioned and in those instances the executive from words of proclamations was the sole judge as to whether the constitution met the requirements.

Democrats interested in the Oklahoma situation are waiting to see how closely the law office will follow the precedent to making its recommendations to the president.

The president, whose duty is believed to be only ministerial, is quoted as favoring Oklahoma's admission, notwithstanding the broad statement frequently made that he would turn the constitution down. By ordering a census of the two territories for the purpose of fixing the population, it is demonstrated that Washington proposes to accept no one's word as to conditions here but will secure evidence from agents specially detailed in the field.

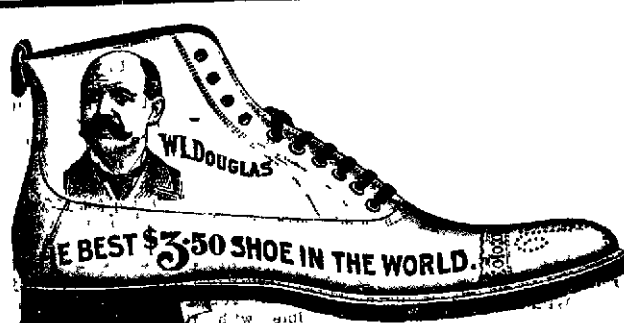

There is, however, a political condition presented which might make it desirable not to have Oklahoma in the Union until after the next presidential election, and the unfortunate constitutional tangle may furnish the national leaders, what it appears, can not control the president in the matter, the avenue for shifting the responsibility to congress, where it can be accepted with more or less impunity.

Missed him and grazed a lady's shoulder.

The jury found him guilty, but the case was appealed.

The Old Roman.
Could anyone come away from the democratic state convention, without feeling the greatest admiration for that noble old democratic Roman, Judge Furman? There he stood with the second highest vote of any of the seven candidates, and yet, due to the rule of the state committee, one senator must come from each territory, hence Judge Furman failed to realize the honorable ambition of his life. Yet his democracy was above his personal ambition, and not a regret or protest was uttered by him. Indeed, his only wish seemed to be for the success of democracy—New State Tribune.

SHOT BY HIS DARLING WIFE

Negro and Spouse Quarrel--Repelling an Attack With Chair She Shoots Him in the Mouth

Tom Thomas a young negro residing in the Black Bottoms had a difficulty with his wife, Mary, Friday afternoon at 5:30. Result Tom lies with a dangerous bullet wound in the neck and Mary languishes in the federal jail charged with the shooting. As the story runs Tom and his wife quarreled Friday morning and she went away to the house of a neighbor, Dora Rhodes. In the afternoon he went to Dora's and remonstrated with his wife, emphasizing the argument with a chair and other household articles. In repelling his savage attack, Mary says she grabbed her revolver, a small 32-caliber affair, and fired the bullet struck Tom in the mouth, lodging in the back of his neck. His wife went immediately to the United States marshal's office and surrendered. Surgical attendance was secured at once for the wounded negro and his recovery is thought quite possible. Of course the wife will be held in custody awaiting the effect of the wound. Tom was in the employ of the cotton firm of Frierson Bros, and he and his wife have heretofore been considered quite orderly negroes.

Rev. Mike Cassidy will deliver an address to the men and boys of Ada Sunday afternoon, and he respectfully requests every one of you to be present. He agrees that you may leave your coat at home, and that the windows and doors of the new church shall be wide open that you may keep cool while he talks. His object is to have an honest heart-to-heart talk with the men and boys of Ada, and he does not want to find you playing "hooky" on this occasion. Tell your friends and be there with them. The business men are especially urged to come.

OKLAHOMA'S STRUGGLE FOR STATEHOOD.

Under the caption above the Dallas News summarizes our statehood status in the following editorial, which seems to fear our democracy has taken a little too much advantage:

There seems to be every likelihood now that the people of Oklahoma will have an early opportunity to pass judgment on the work of those whom they commissioned to make a constitution. The News' understanding of the matter is that the constitution may now be submitted to a vote, notwithstanding any appeal that may be taken from the Oklahoma supreme court's decision that it has no authority to review the acts of the convention. A body which has almost the plenary power of the people themselves. The decision amounts to a declaration that it is not for the court to determine, in a proceeding as was brought against the convention officers, whether any of the provisions of the constitution that are objected to are subject to or are not compatible with the federal constitution. Chairman Murray has very promptly taken steps to have the constitution submitted to the people, and even should the supreme court hold to a view contrary to that which has been taken by the Oklahoma tribunal, its decision will come too late to prevent action by the people.

The decision as to whether the proposed constitution is a substantial compliance with the enabling act, will, in all probability, therefore, be made by the president. After the constitution shall have been adopted, any specific thing done by virtue of the power it confers may be challenged in the courts, and in that way the question as to whether any of the provisions of the instrument are in conflict with the federal constitution will be answered by the highest tribunal in the land.

It seems to be assumed, and doubtless correctly, that the part of it picked out as most vulnerable to attack is that which prescribes the political subdivisions. The News has no doubt that the hand that marked off the senatorial, representative and congressional districts was guided by a full consideration of party advantage. The thing has been done before, indeed, so frequently that we should have been astonished if the democrats of Oklahoma had foreborne to emulate the bad example. The president has ordered that a census be made of every proposed subdivision, and Mr. Murray has appointed a committee to consider whatever objections the republicans may have to the plan of districting agreed on. We ought to get considerable enlightenment from those proceedings.

If the gerrymander amounts to a disfranchisement of voters, the democrats would do well to correct it at once. A gerrymander, although a discrimination against the opposing party, is not necessarily tantamount to a disfranchisement of voters; but if the apportionment provided for in the constitution amounts to that, it would be unmitigated folly for the democrats to persist in it. Such an injustice as that would be a valid reason for denying admission to Oklahoma, and it must be obvious to the democrats there that the president will be content with less than a valid reason. Prudence will prompt them to yield something of the advantage enjoyed by their political opponents in having their partisan in the White house.

DO IT NOW.

Cut your weeds.

Have you cut those weeds? If you haven't, DO IT NOW.

Cheer up. Ada may be floating on a sea of oil for all you know.

What's the matter with that pottery? Let's get somebody interested.

Hold your breath—the drill is nearing the gas pocket or oil pool—either one. We will tell you which later on.

The Katy railroad enjoys the police protection of the city. Then why should she not obey its ordinances? They should be given a trial, at least.

Politics is uncertain, but it is reasonably sure that Oklahoma will be a democratic state, with seven votes in the college, if admitted in time to vote in the election next year. Those seven votes may decide the thing, as did the three votes of Colorado thirty-two years earlier. History sometimes repeats itself. The g. o. p. is human, and it is only natural for it to file a protest against adding seven votes to the democratic column in the college in 1908. But there is another consideration. The thing would be transparent, and it would be arbitrary. Deep seated in the American character is a love of fair play, and an injury visited on Oklahoma might be resented in some other communities where the republican fences are not so secure as they were. And it is possible that is what will fetch Oklahoma into the election of 1908.—Washington Post.

RED RIVER NAVIGATION.

Morris Sheppard Visits Paris in Connection With the Project.

Paris, Texas, June 28.—Congressman Morris Sheppard is in the city, gathering data in regard to the tonnage on Red River, to be embodied in the report of the engineer of this district for the fiscal year ending June 30. He called on Secretary Ragland of the Board of Trade, Captain S. J. Wright and others, and will go tomorrow to Fort Towson, I. T., to interview George L. Harvey, who is operating a steamboat on the river in the lumber business. He says he has already visited the lower section of the river and finds great interest taken in the subject of navigation. One lumber company is constructing six large barges at Fulton, Ark., and has had a 60-horsepower steamboat built at Cairo, Ill., to pull them. The Ames Shovel and Tool company, which has a plant here, has purchased a small boat at Lyons, Iowa, to raft logs down to Archer City to ship over the Frisco to Paris. It will be introduced as an experiment and will not attempt to haul logs up stream, but will be used to push and guide the rafts. With these two boats and the government snagboat quarter boats operating on Upper Red river, within the next two or three months, Congressman Sheppard says the era of actual navigation will have really begun.

Douglas' Prospects Rising.

Judge W. C. Raymond, the recognized head of the republican party in this territory, is carefully preparing his state for republican party nominations, and is likely to select Clarence B. Douglas, one of the attaches of the Muskogee Phoenix as one of the two candidates for members of the legislature. While Judge Raymond concedes that Mr. Douglas is without experience qualifying him for such important duties as will devolve upon the first state legislature, yet he insists that as he will select a man of experience for the other member, and has confidence that there is good material in Mr. Douglas for development of legislative ability. Of course, the Tribune believes that the democratic nominees will be elected to represent Muskogee county in the legislature, and yet we are glad to see care taken by both parties to nominate good men but the importance of the first legislature suggests the impropriety of going too far with experiments.—New State Tribune.

NEW STATE NOTES.

(From The Oklahoman.)
Real estate dealers at Ardmore have perfected an organization.

Wheat is reported as making an excellent yield in Custer county.

Johnnie Smith, a little boy, was instantly killed by being struck by lightning near Loco.

The republican party in Oklahoma appears to have lost track of its bell weather.

After all the people of Indian Territory have no great dread of the sting of the Asp.

The man who does not lend a helping hand in promoting the welfare of his town and county should make room for another, says Alverson of the Loco Ledger.

It is somewhat novel to have the "blocks of five" graduates of Indiana offer advice to the people of the new state relative to political morals.

As a result of the wheat shortage and the rising price of flour, the Oklahoma consumer must convince himself that the half loaf is better than the whole.

The town of Thomas is now on the dry list, but there are several applications for liquor license before the county commissioners.

The towns of Oklahoma can have no better advertisement than shady and clean streets, nice parks and handsomely painted houses.

The Madill News makes this comment relative to the vanishing joys of life: "Constable Grider captured and smashed 76 bottles of booze at the depot Friday evening."

A deposit of white marble susceptible of a high polish has been discovered near Thonias, Okla. The extent of the deposit has not been ascertained, but a quarry is to be opened at once.

It remained for an Oklahoma man to discover that the 2-cent fare in Missouri counts for little, as the railroads there only carry 100 pounds of baggage free, when the former limit was 150 pounds.

Judge Raymond, in discussing President Roosevelt's motives in calling for a census enumeration in the new state, is merely speaking the sentiment of the ebony-hued section of the republican party, of which he is the major donor.

The republican party in Oklahoma was so busily engaged in hammering the constitution that it exhausted its strength and paralyzed its nerve centers. It is apparently unable to present a respectable front in the state campaign now at hand.

The newspapers at Lawton have published a joint announcement that they have tired of boosting the town when the business men there carry all their printing to the job printing houses. The appeal is strong and sensible and should be fruitful of results.

The parents of Fred Ratcliff, a Vinita boy, have just received a letter from him dated at Dawson, Yukon, telling of the 100-mile trip down the Yukon river from White Horse, in an open boat. He says in that part of the world the sun rises at 3:30 in the afternoon and sets at 9:30 at night.

"Oklahoma owes everything to the republican party," says the Clio Chief-tain. The statement is rather broad in its scope. It does, in fact, owe much to the republican party: Years of misrule, exile from statehood for years, a reign of graft under territorial rule that is almost without parallel. Yes, Oklahoma owes much to the republican party and the debt will be paid when statehood is secured.

Emmanuel Church (formerly Cumberland Presbyterian)—Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Preaching at 11 a. m. Christian Endeavor meeting at 3 p. m. All cordially invited. No preaching in the evening owing to the revival at the Methodist church.

First Baptist Church—There will be the regular services tomorrow. All members are urged to be present at the morning services as business of importance is to be transacted.

Honor Roll.

The following is the Roll of Honor in Miss Fleeta Smith's school: Nellie Moss, Theo. Copeland, Mae Anderson, Byron Little, Neal Perryman, Bailey Lovett, Fred Morris, Fred Chapman, Ray Lowery, Blanche Cole, Blaine Cole, Ree Coleman, Pearl Little, Grady Cole, Marvin Cassidy, Lloyd Little, Robert Edwards, Edith Adams, Virdie Lowery, Sadie Moss, Estel Hall.

Made Tour of Oil Fields.

G. P. Carney has returned from an extensive tour of observation through the Kansas and territory oil and gas fields. He struck the Glen Pool just after the recent devastation by wind and lightning. The burning oil tanks, he says, made the most impressive spectacle he ever witnessed, the whole heavens and earth seeming to be ablaze.

Doesn't Expect Removal of Division.

Tom Burns, roundhouse foreman for the Frisco at Francis, spent the night here. Like the other employees of the Frisco at Francis, he would like to see Ada made the division point, but he thinks the change highly improbable, since the difference in mileage coming to trainmen would cost the company about a dollar extra for each train.

He says the payroll at Francis now amounts to about $5,000 a month.

About Ada Folk.

Sulphur, 1 T., June 27—Col. F. O. Harris, Maj. G. O. Hunter, Gen. John Rindard, Attorney Thomas Holt and one hundred and ninety-six other Ada citizens came to Sulphur, Ada's Carlbad, yesterday to hear Billie Bryan, the great commoner, and to mix for a few hours in the gaities of this resort. Ada people have always looked upon Sulphur and Plut park as their outing place, their resort, their Carlbad. This is the light in which all other towns should regard this city of many springs and cool, Arbutle breezes.

RETURNS FROM JAPAN.

Hear Miss Roach Tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church.

It will be remembered that about two years ago Miss Ruth Roach, sister to our esteemed fellow-townsmen, H. B. Roach, left Ada for Japan, where she was engaged in mission work until recently, when she was compelled to return on account of ill health. She is in Ada and will address the Christian Endeavor at the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Everyone is cordially invited to hear this Christian woman of wide experience. Since the women of the town will not attend the men's service, they should furnish a liberal attendance.

Big Night for Negroes.

It was a gala evening for the Dark-tanned population. A big ball was pulled off in the building formerly known as the Saddle Rock Restaurant. The negro band belonging to the street fair folks furnished entrancing music and the light fantastic was tripped 'till the wee small hours. There was the minimum of disorder. Trouble at one time began to brew, but it was quickly suppressed by a patrolman's speedy appearance. Also a prize fight had been quietly planned for the evening, the participants to be a local negro sport and a member of the carnival company. But this part of the program fell through quickly when it was discovered the local officers could not be "fixed."

It goes to the roots of disease, invigorates, strengthens, exhilarates. Its life producing properties are not contained in any other known remedy. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Sold at Ramsey's Drug Store.

MIKE CASSIDY STILL PREACHING.

He Preached to a Large Audience on Friday Evening—Announcements.

The evangelist's subject last evening was "The Spiritual Birth." He handled it well. He held out that the only true salvation came about by a regeneration of the soul, that the conversion of a sinner was as much a miracle as was the raising of Lazarus from the dead. He denied that ceremonial salvation would do, insisting that the life must be made anew. He attacked the theory of evolution, and upheld the idea of a close relationship of God and man.

There was no service this forenoon. The regular service will be conducted this evening. All are urged to attend. Rev. Cassidy will preach Sunday at 11 a. m., again in the afternoon to men and boys, and in the evening. On account of other meetings conflicting with the men's services two weeks ago there were not very many out, and for that reason it is hoped that a good crowd will be on hand at the services for men and boys tomorrow. Tell your neighbor and come, for Mike Cassidy is known for his great love for men, and he wants to have a talk with those of Ada, his neighbors.

STILL FEEL LIGHTNING.

Two Ada Men Had a Narrow Escape From a Thunderbolt.

M. P. Donaghey and M. P. Eaton are still tingling a little as the result of a shock from lightning last Wednesday night. They were returning home late, after hearing Bryan at Sulphur, when they took refuge from a thunder storm in the revival tent near the Baptist church. Suddenly both were knocked down and upon regaining consciousness felt like pins were sticking all over their bodies. It was found that a thunderbolt had struck the church tearing off a lot of shingles, and following the electric wire, broke all the globes in the tent. Naturally the men still feel a bit nervous.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure by local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proved catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

GOOD FOR EVIL

How Micky Won the Game for the Boyceville Nine

Fellows we've just got to win the game tomorrow. Those Jonesville chaps have been strutting around in a way that's unbearable ever since they beat us last year. We've got to take the prize out of them and that in a hurry.

Captain Jack Dunsmore's delivery of this speech made a profound impression on his hearers among whom were the entire Boyceville nine and three or four of their loyal supporters.

Well Jim Warner's aim is entirely wobbly again and if he takes care of himself until tomorrow I don't see how we can help winning. And Catcher Bob and the rest of the group murmur assent.

But let's teach the swimmin' hole first. Will Bill Wolf sprinting down the dusty road at a mad pace as the clamor of trees that marked their favorite bathing place came into view I very soon there accepted the challenge and away they dashed racing such a cloud of dust as would have done credit to a herd of cattle.

Bill Wolf dove down the long slope that led to the edge of the creek, but before he had gone half way he was up and from among the trees he was calling. Hold up fellows, that new Micky O Toole is down there swimmin'. Let's teach him and hang to it where they belong at the other end of the town.

Arriving themselves with pine cones and sticks and clods of earth the jury at a signal from Bill swept down the bank like an avalanche and discharged their missiles as one man at the unoffending Micky. The suddenness of the onslaught staggered Micky but he quickly recovered himself and hurriedly made for the opposite shore where from the shelter of a tree he answered their screams of laughter with words of defiance. Soon he disappeared with a final yell for any fellow to come over if he wanted a licking.

Th next minute all were sporting themselves in the water having a jolly good time if one might judge from the roars of merriment that arose on every side.

All at once a sharp cry of pain rang out followed by a sliding and rattling and scuffling as something crashed down the steep bank just by the bend.

Whistling fishes exclaimed Pete Hamilton as he arrived on the scene. It was Jim Warner—and some things wrong with his arm too.

He was right. Jim had slipped at the top of the slope, had fallen heavily on his arm and then rolled down the bank.

When Captain Dunsmore mustered his men on the ballground the following day any one could see with half an eye that the Boyceville team had lost all hope although still prepared to fight their hardest. But Will Brant couldn't pitch worth a cent and he was the best they had.

The game was just about ready to begin when Captain Jack felt some body tap him on the shoulder. Looking around he saw Micky O Toole his freckled face adorned with a broad friendly grin.

Say he said I hear you fellows are hard up for a pitcher. I can pitch a little myself and if I can help you out—why I'm willing.

You're a trump Micky cried Jack shaking him heartily by the hand. It's downright splendid of you to do the way the fellows treated you yesterday.

As Micky had modestly suggested he could pitch a little—indeed it was said that he was a shade better than Jim Warner the star.

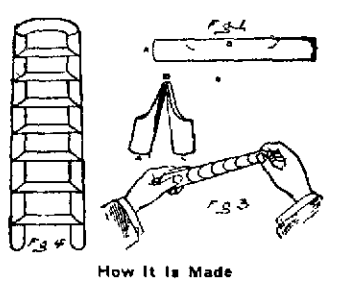

Boyceville of course won the game and you may rest assured that Micky went swimmin' in the Old Swimming Hole whenever he pleased thereafter.

CONUNDRUMS

I cannot a butcher be an honest man? Because he steals his knives.

Have you seen a strong man do tricks? There is a trick you can do on a small scale which will make a very pretty little paper ladder. Take a strip of paper about 21 inches long by six wide. Roll it loosely but evenly so that your thumb (if you are a little chap) or your forefinger (if you are a grown up) will slip easily into the roll. Press the roll flat and with sharp scissors cut out a piece as marked by dotted lines which will make the roll look boat shaped. Then press the center of the bottom of the little boat below B up and A and C down and make a sharp crease at B as in figure

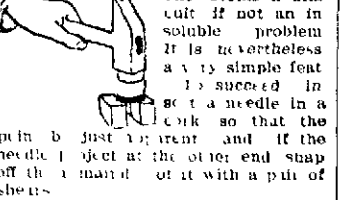

How It Is Made

Then holding the ends A and C lightly in the left hand grasp one fold of the paper at B out of the broken roll and keep on pulling (see figure 3) gently and firmly until the ladder is complete. The sides of the ladder should be even says Good Literature so that it may be shut up again like a telescope. A little practice will make perfect in this and amuse little people and big.

The strong man does this with an enormous roll of paper which he tears with his fingers instead of using scissors.

How to Pierce a Nickel with a Needle

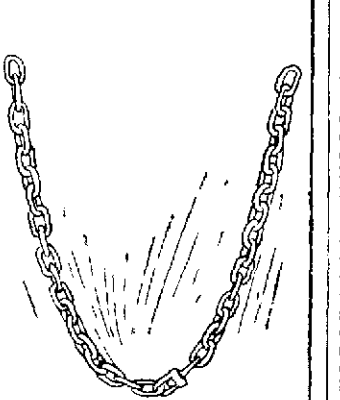

To pierce a nickel with a needle especially if the needle be a very fine one seems a difficult feat. It is not an insoluble problem. It is nevertheless a very simple feat to succeed in.

Get a nickel and a cork so that the needle is just in contact with the nickel. Push the needle through the cork and if the needle is just in contact with the nickel it will pierce it with a pull of about one ounce.

The chain shown in the accompanying photograph is a fine example of industry and skill having been cut out of a solid piece of oak by a Suffolk Island man some 60 years ago the only tool used being an ordinary pocketknife. Measuring about three and one half feet in length the chain itself contains 35 links with a swivel in the center which latter must have been the most difficult part of the carver's handiwork. In spite of this however the whole was completed without a flaw or join and it is probable that this is the longest piece of carved chain work of its kind extant.

Nons Lost.

Sand Bar ferry near Augusta Ga. is a flatboat affair frail and rickety. Two timid ladies hesitating to cross, pined the negro boatman with questions about it says Youth's Companion.

And are you perfectly sure no one has ever been lost here? they demanded.

No missus replied the ferryman. No one aint ever been lost here. Maise Jake Bristol done got spilled out and drowned last week but dey found im again nex day. We aint never los nobody no maam.

Uncle Jack—I suppose you ride on your donkey when you want to?

Johnny—Oh no! I ride when the donkey wants me to.

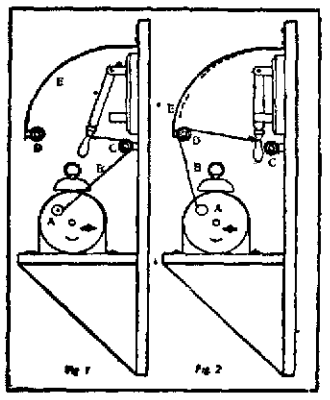

AUTOMATIC TIME SWITCH.

Can Be Used to Open or Close the Circuit

This device can be used to either open or close the circuit at any desired time. An alarm clock is firmly fastened to a wooden bracket and provided with a small wood or metal drum A to which is fastened a cord B. The other end of the cord is tied to the switch handle so that when the alarm goes off the switch is either opened or closed depending on whether the cord is passed over pulley C or pulley D.

When the cord is passed over pulley C as shown in Fig 1 the circuit will be closed when the alarm goes off but if it is passed over D the circuit will be opened. Pulley D is fastened to a piece of spring steel which in operation is bent as shown by the dotted lines thus explains Popular Mechanics causing the switch to snap open quickly and prevent forming an arc.

To draw a circle on glass with a pen or glass use a small piece of cardboard on the glass and push the center point of the compass into the cardboard.

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Instrument Which Receives and Delivers Messages at Long Range

The latest time-saving addition to business system is a little instrument which enables the head of a business or department to converse with one or all of his subordinate officers in an ordinary tone of voice in any part of his office and without holding the apparatus to his ear or mouth. Their replies will come to him in like fashion so that the whole conversation will be just the same as if all parties were talking together in one room. If the manager wishes to communicate with one person only he can easily make it impossible for anyone else to overhear and if he wishes to see the replies secret from someone in his own office there is a receiver which he can use in the ordinary way.

Poulson Wireless Progressing

Vladimir Poulson the Danish inventor expects soon to establish wireless communication across the Atlantic from Denmark to America. He has erected a station a few miles from Copenhagen and an American station will be completed in a few weeks. His system is based on sending electric waves which he says have inexhaustible power where the spark system loses energy over long distances. Mr Poulson first perfected his system for a distance of 40 miles increasing it to 120 180 and 760 miles now he declares that he can operate over greater distances than the Atlantic's breadth.

Wireless Station on Airship

The possibilities and practical utility of wireless telegraphy in aerial navigation will be thoroughly investigated aboard Count Zeppelin's ship this summer. A wireless station has been installed on the craft in which instead of extending upward as in other stations the receiver extends downward consisting of a bronze wire 300 feet long. Power from the airship's two 80 hp motors works the transmitter which is capable of sending messages 150 miles.

Nitrogen Gas. The use of nitrogen gas has been tried in France for inflating tires.

POWER OF ELECTRICITY

Railways of the World to Be Operated By This Irresistible Force

Electricity now completely dominates the urban railway systems of America and Europe and is invading with irresistible force that of suburban and interurban railroads to such an extent that it would be difficult to enumerate them even in the United States.

The systems which reach out from Boston with connections which extend 40 50 and even 100 miles are only a sample of the wonderful development of the last 15 years while the prospects for future means of transportation in New England are so comprehensive as to exclude the use of steam by all the companies which operate transportation lines for passengers and freight within a radii of 50 miles at least from all large centers of population.

A single line from Indianapolis to Cincinnati a distance of 120 miles already enjoys a large traffic in both freight and passengers and the New York Central railroad company proposes to at once install electricity in place of steam to a distance of 40 miles in all its vast system radiating from New York city.

In Europe one of the longest electric lines is from Liverpool to Southampton although many projects of even more gigantic proportions are under way throughout England.

Most of these lines are in regions where there are not sufficient water falls from which to generate power. But where there are waterfalls—the surest easiest and most economical source of energy in the world—there is no reason why the electric engine should not supersede steam entirely while it seems positive that a great region which has no railroads would if lines were to be built adopt the electric system even though there were no water power and having that would not hesitate in the choice.

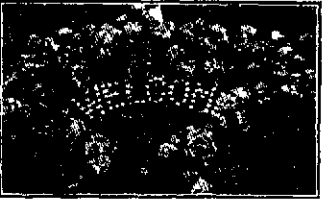

The Italian government in conjunction with the railroads has been carrying on successful experiments and extending the use of electricity for nearly ten years and now a line is being fitted up from Rome to Civita Castellana.

The governments of Norway and Sweden are already occupied with the application of electricity to the larger lines. France is equipping roads with it as fast as possible and being outdone by Germany Switzerland is adopting it as rapidly as possible. Spain has awakened to the importance of electric railways and is about to build one nearly 100 miles long. Mexico has just equipped one of over 100 miles and the United States has many which are still under way. In Colombia where there are practically no railroads the most prominent enterprise is the contemplated utilization of the vast torrents now plunging to waste from the high peaks as means to operate new railroads which the electric will be the wonder of the world.

ELECTRIC BOUQUET

A Novelty Which is Proving Very Popular

A pleasing electric novelty which any electrician can easily make is the electric bouquet. The idea is suited to many occasions such as receptions weddings and presentations. In a large bouquet or less of natural flowers are placed small incandescent lamps either white or colored arranged in the form of letters to produce either initials or words. For example says Popular Mechanics on the recent occasion of a reception given by his employees to their manager on his return from a long absence a mammoth bouquet of roses was presented to him in the middle of which glowing in soft colors was the word Welcome. Current was taken from a wall bracket through a flexible cord 20 feet long which permitted the bouquet to be carried about the room.

The Electric Bouquet

By the use of X rays and the cine-matograph an apparatus for repeated photography of moving objects at very brief intervals scientists have succeeded in photographing movements of internal organs like the heart and lungs. These moving pictures when reproduced on a screen are of great assistance to medical men.

Moving Pictures of the Heart

Hydraulic sluicing is being employed at Seattle Wash for the removal of a large hill in the residential section of the city. The material consists principally of blue clay which is exceedingly tenacious and hard to move but is easily handled by a six inch giant nozzle at 120 pound pressure hydraulic. The supply of water is taken from Puget Sound some 2500 feet distant.

Miss Betty's Cavalier

BY ZONA GALE

(Copyright by Joseph B. Bowles)

As he turned the corner the new rector's heart was beating. There was nothing formidable about the great gabled house yet as he walked up the drive his agitation increased. There was a glimpse of pink muslin on the veranda that was most disquieting.

However he went on and a bend in the drive revealed Miss Betty Sheridan standing upon a chair training roses. The picture which would have agitated even a quiet heart caused the rector to contemplate retreat. Instead being a brave man he stood at the foot of the steps and said gently:

Good morning Miss Betty. Betty looked down and nodded lowly and stooped to extend her hand over the back of the chair.

You'll forgive my not getting down? she asked. This is a critical moment. Max please find Mr. Armory a chair.

From the vine covered piazza came forth a big languid figure who gave the final touch to the uneasiness of the rector. Since his coming to the parish of St. Luke's three months before and since he had first seen Betty Sheridan on the same day he had felt a secret and most unchristian repugnance for this big cavalier who seemed always within sound of her voice.

How do Mr. Armory? said the big cavalier in flannels looking uncomfortably handsome—uncomfortably to the rector. Come up and be cool. It's a pretty warm morning.

Very admitted the rector. Ah—very.

You ought not to be so busy this warm weather. volunteered Betty—and Betty was never so alluring as when she advised people for their own good.

My duties are my pleasure said the rector. This for instance Miss Sheridan.

This big cavalier in flannels with hands that one instantly knew could send a ball over a net or across a court with unerring stroke was very like what the rector himself dreamed in his college days of becoming. This cavalier was one of her world—of Betty Sheridan's world. But to the rector had come the struggle that had ended in his taking orders and some way since his coming to this house what distant parish there had been no time to lift either his golf sticks or his tails from their long rest. Instead of the life which reminded him of his college days he had a severe fall. She will be quite helpless then for months.

The rector bough flew up with a wish that he could see Betty and sit opposite the rector.

Oh she said the poor girl! What will they do. I'll go see her to day.

I thought that you would said the rector with a little clutch on his breath. Betty's face was even more beautiful when she was in earnest than when she was mocking.

Why yes said the big cavalier in the doorway. I'll drive over after lunch. Betty. But what have to be back for the tennis fields you know.

Yes Max said Betty without looking at him. And will you ask your mother if we may have some of her roses too? I am so sorry Mr. Armory. We will not tell you.

The Reverend Mr. Armory was ashamed of his sinful rebellion at that. We. The very fact that Betty did not look at the big cavalier when he talked and that she ordered him about and took him and his mother's roses for granted disturbed the rector's peace of mind.

Sitting beside poor Aline Chapman that afternoon the Reverend Mr. Armory experienced some trials of the spirit. His heart which went out to the stricken girl at the same time bounded so suddenly at the slightest footfall outside that he was deaf. In doubt as to his right to be there at all engaged in ministrations. When at last Betty appeared in the doorway with her arms filled with roses not even the memory of whose mother's roses they were could put out the sudden passionate love in the rector's eyes. He sat motionless near while Betty bent over the sick girl and Betty's hand in the sun Betty's little hand on the coarse spread Betty's wonderful voice filled the shabby room with wonder. The Reverend Mr. Armory walked to the window to hide his emotion. And outside stepping leisurely in the bearing sun of the steep little street his eye fell upon a bay horse and a low phaeton and the big cavalier—all waiting patiently for Betty.

The rector then turned from the window his eyes hardening.

Don't let us detain you too long Miss Sheridan he said evenly. It is very hot in the street—for your friend to wait.

Betty looked up wonderingly. Who—Max? she said. Oh—Max. Then she lifted her chin a little in displaced surprise.

Very well she said. I will come some other time when I find Agnes alone.

She was gone in a moment and the room was stuffy and sunny and unbearable as before and the phaeton wheels were clattering down the rough street. Horror at his sinful jealousy and petty speech possessed the rector, and he turned to the poor thin face on the pillow in a passion of remorse.

The rector passed his own gate that night and went on to the chapel. He was suddenly profoundly disturbed as to his own spiritual condition. When had he ever harbored such sinful thoughts toward another?

It was still and cool in the dim little chapel. The rector sank down in a pew and buried his face in his hands. Almost the burden was greater than he could bear he thought as he looked ahead on the dreary days of joyless toil. For his sad heart told him he could no longer regulate his own dreams to say nothing of his rebellious spirit. else why should he be waking and sleeping be dreaming of some one whom he was doomed forever to watch while she moved in that other world—her world—peopled by a train of cavaliers whose interest were like her own.

The rector rose suddenly. He had never had the luxury of time for sorrow. He turned to the door and it opened and Betty came in. She was in white with roses in her belt and to the Reverend Mr. Armory she was like an angelic presence in the gray chapel. Her cheeks were flushed and she was in some adorable hesitation.

Mr. Armory she said beseechingly. I saw you come here—and I came to tell you—I was horrid and stupid this afternoon—you must forgive me—will you?

She held out her hand. Before he knew the rector had taken it in both his own and stood looking down at her in a moment of thankfulness and a fear that was sweet like hope. It was I he said brokenly. You must forgive me. You don't know what you coming there meant to me—you don't know how happy it made me. But then I thought that that sort of thing was my whole life to me and just a sort of interlude to you made me wicked and rebellious. Don't you see? It made us seem so hopelessly apart. I seemed so outside your world—and I didn't want that I wanted—

You Must Forgive Me—Will You?

The rector stopped amazed at his own drift.

But Betty did not stop him. She met his eyes and her own faltered a little and her hand fluttered in his and lay still. The rector of St. Marks looked down at her a great incredulous dawning in his eyes.

Did you think said Betty then a little defiantly that I wanted to go away when I did? To leave—to leave that—

Betty said there but her tone was soft and the rector heard. And still he doubted—she was so throbbing with life so keen in her love for the vague glittering interests which the big cavalier shared.

Betty said the rector almost wistfully. Betty—

But the warning did not even serve him. He drew her close to him imprisoning her hands compelling her eyes.

Betty he cried ringingly. do you know what that means?

Betty's head was hidden but he heard.

I've known since this afternoon she said when I had to go and play tennis and leave you there.

Had to go and play tennis. Had to go with the big cavalier? Had to leave that stuffy little room—and him?

All the silent chapel was suddenly filled with little singing voices that followed them when presently they were in the street and at the gate of the gaunt house. Around the corner was disappearing the big cavalier and beside him a gown of ruffled blue.

Betty laughed suddenly. That's Charlotte she said. We didn't expect her till tomorrow. After she came Max was crazy at having to drive me down to—to you at Chapman's. But I wanted to come and I made him.

Charlotte? questioned the rector in a kind of happy spell.

Betty glanced up wonderingly. Oh I forgot that you wouldn't know she said. It's my sister Charlotte. They—they are in love too. Tool? cried the rector rapturously.
